Mexico Moves On Dictators As Rebellions Split 2 States

20,000 Peasants Besiege Governor

Troops Called to Quell Revolt of 2,000 Near Texas Border.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, July 23.—President Lazaro Cardenas tonight imposed a censorship throughout Mexico, took control in the troubled State of Tabasco and moved to oust Gov. Rafael Villareal of Tamaulipas State in a series of executive proclamations.

The censorship was lifted after several hours during which Cardenas, operating from the State of Colimas, appeared to have entrenched himself firmly against followers of former President Plutarco Elias Calles by:

1. Decreeing suspension of state powers in Tabasco, where he moved drastically against the Red Shirt supporters of former Secretary of Agriculture Tomas Garrid Canabal, absolute but unofficial dictator of the state and leading anti-churchman.

2. Dealing with an agrarian uprising in Tamaulipas, where 20,000 peasants marched against the capital, Ciudad Victoria, to demand resignation of the governor.

Troops Called Out.

3. Mobilizing Federal troops to quell a revolt of 2,000 farmers at Matamoros, across the border from Brownsville, Tex., where the Mexico farmers' political organization protested taxation and land policies of the authorities.

4. Appointing Gen. Miguel Henriquez Guzman military commander in Tabasco, succeeding Gen. Pilar Sanchez, Red Shirt supporter.

5. Appointing Gen. Aureo Calles—not related to the former president—provisional governor of Tabasco, succeeding Manuel Lastra Ortiz, also a Red Shirt sympathizer.

Cardenas' actions in Tabasco, all constitutional and supported by the congressional commission, resulted from country-wide protest against 12 political murders July 15 in Villahermost, Tabasco. Officals feared revolutionary outbreaks unless drastic executive action was taken in the state, where Garrido was organizing his armed Red Shirts to dominate elections scheduled for August 18.

Churchmen Laud Move.

Politicians, workers, peasants and churchmen were impressed favorably by Cardenas' quick action following his investigation of the Tabasco murders, which were traced directly to Garrido and his political henchmen.

Churchmen regarded Garrido as their worst enemy. Garrido long has feared direct action by the president. He reportedly imported arms and ammunition in readiness for resistance in defense of his 15 years' rule over Tabasco.

Today's concentration of Federal troops and changes in military and civilian authorities, however, appeared likely to prevent revolt. The Admiral Being Kept in Complete Isolation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 23.—Admiral Richard E. Byrd is so critically ill at West Tremont, Me., that all letters and communications must be kept from him to preserve his health, Commander George O. Noville, his Antarctic buddy, said today.

"He's a very sick man," Noville declared after his return from Maine. "He is secluded on a peninsula some miles southeast of Bangor, on a bay near Penobscot Bay."

Byrd became seriously ill after he returned to Boston from his second Antarctic expedition. He went to Maine at once for a rest and doctors were called into consultation.

D. C. Cab Men Defy Order to Cut Rates

400 Union Drivers to Ignore P. U. C. Ruling for Lower Scale.

In defiance of a Public Utilities Commission order for lower fares, a spokesman for union cab drivers yesterday announced 400 drivers would continue their 20 to 80-cent rates.

Adolphe Hohensee, business agent for the organized cab operators, in effect flouted the commission by predicting his followers would refuse to enforce the P. U. C.-sponsored scale of 20, 30, 50 and 70 cents.

Another labor leader, Bernard Henning, Cab Drivers' Protective Union president, assailed the commission's order as "insane" and described as "starvation wages" the rates proposed.

The commission's schedule was due to become effective last midnight.

Washington's taxicab situation has been in a turmoil since the one-day strike of drivers during the Shriners' convention here several weeks ago.

Testimony at hearings recently closed by the P. U. C. brought out that a majority of the city's drivers already were operating under the 20, 30, 50, 70 cent scale.

There was speculation over what action the commission or other local authorities would take should the union operators carry out their challenge.

Hohensee protested the commission order would mean wages of $15 a week or less for most drivers.

"The order," he complained, "did nothing to correct the evils which have degraded the industry. How does the commission think the drivers can support their families if they're only going to make about 20 cents an hour?

"Our union just simply isn't going to accept the order."

Reporters were present when Hohensee telephoned Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, to object to the order.

"You heard the testimony at the

Leaders Slash Estate Levies For Close Kin

Democratic Group Plans $50,000 Exemption for Relatives.

By the Associated Press.

The President's tax bill began definitely to take a middle-of-the-road course yesterday amid new Republican insistence that Congress adjourn without voting any wealth levies.

Behind locked doors, and with Republicans excluded, House Ways and Means Committee Democrats agreed that the new inheritance taxes should bear less heavily on widows, sons, daughters, adopted children, grandchildren, brothers, sisters and parents than on others.

They decided, in fact, that the close relatives enumerated should be allowed to inherit $50,000 without paying any tax. But they agreed that the exemption to others should be only $10,000. Then they accepted a rate schedule estimated to raise $100,000,000 on inheritances annually.

Adjournment Asked.

At almost the same moment that agreement was being reached, Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, introduced a resolution for a final adjournment of the session on August 10. He let the resolution lie on the Vice President's table for action later.

Hastings issued no public statement about his resolution, but he was one of the Republican leaders who has frequently advocated that Congress adjourn now and reconvene in November or next January to pass the tax bill.

There was no indication that Democratic leaders would agree with him. On the contrary, New Deal chiefs predicted freely that when the adjournment resolution was called up it would be defeated.

The Ways and Means Committee Democrats were working under renewed pressure of leaders who want the new bill ready for House action by the middle of next week. Their nerves obviously were on edge as a result of their hard work since January.

Yesterday, newspapermen waited

F. C. C. Orders Data in Faking Of Telegrams

By James D. Secrest.

The Federal Communications Commission late yesterday took a hand in the Congressional investigation of the power lobby as the Senate lobby committee uncovered evidence of the use of a dead man's name on a telegram and of alleged efforts to bring pressure upon a newspaper reporter in York, Pa.

Western Union, Postal and other telegraph companies were ordered by the communications commission to submit data under oath on the extent of the transmission of forged telegrams which sought to influence members of Congress into voting against the "death clause" in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Other developments in the lobby inquiries were:

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, challenged tax figures for the steel industry coming from the American Iron and Steel Institute and appearing in a dispatch in The Washington Post. He said the figures of the steel industry were inspired as part of the propaganda against the President's tax bill and urged that the committee investigate lobbying against the tax program.

House Inquiry Broadened.

The House Rules Committee revealed that secret inquiries have been held in connection with its lobby investigation, and committee agents are at work in New York, Chicago and Atlanta.

Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Senate committee, announced that the current inquiry will be carried into other sections of the country before the highest officials of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. are called. J. I. Mange and H. C. Hopson, who reputedly control A. G. & E. interests, ultimately will be summoned, he said.

John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co., will be heard this morning as the committee leaves the Pennsylvania in-

$11 Hogs Reappear in Chicago For First Time in Five Years

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 23.—Hog prices at many points throughout the Midwest today reached the highest figure in nearly five years. The $11 hog reappeared on the Chicago livestock market for the first time since September 22, 1930. This figure plus the $2.25 Government processing tax made selected choice medium weight hogs cost buyers $13.25.

Unseasonably light receipts, the result of last summer's drought and the Government's hog-curtailing program, together with the announcement by the Department of Agriculture in Washington yesterday that inspected hog slaughter for the current market year will be the smallest in 25 years, were bullish factors throughout the Midwest generally.

Top quality hogs sold at South St. Paul at a peak of $10.50, a maximum gain over yesterday of 25 cents. At the Omaha market a new top price of $10.55 was paid to Fay Suttles, of Cedar Bluffs, Nebr., for 20 head of choice Hampshires. This was 20 cents above the peak price there yesterday.

Hog prices on the Kansas City market continued to rise, with choice fat porkers bringing $10.50, up 20 cents over yesterday's peak of $10.30, which in itself was 20 cents over the best price of last week.

Hog prices swept upward 15 to 25 cents today at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., on a wave of buying that carried the top to $10.40, the highest there since September 22, 1930. The market at East St. Louis got off to a start of 10 to 15 cent higher prices to an early top of $10.85.

Trading at Chicago was fairly inactive on lighter weights and packing sows. Prices were from 10 to 15 cents higher generally, and with spots up more.

Ouster Laws Menace Jews Of Germany

Admits Aim to Educate People for Coming Drive on Semites.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 23.—A threat to legislate Jews out of Germany was the loudest gun fired today in the Nazis' big drive against "reactionaries," as it swerved temporarily away from Catholics and war veterans to smash at Hebrews.

Julius Streicher, husky, bald Nazi boss of Franconia, who is considered the soul of Nazism's hatred of Jews, voiced the threat in an address at Bernau, suburb of Berlin.

He emphatically predicted anti-Semitic laws "to put Jews in their places"—the first time any high official had said anti-Semitism "must" be made part of German law.

In bringing to the capital the bitter anti-Semitic campaign he already had spread throughout southern Germany, Streicher admittedly was "preparing" the people for what "must come."

Action against Catholics was confined to Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's decree dissolving the Catholic war veterans' organization in Prussia, of which he is premier, in another move to crush "political Catholicism."

Fears Unity Imperiled.

Goering's decree, expected to be duplicated in other states, said separate veterans' organizations imperiled German unity. Officials of the Steel Helmet Veterans' Organization, the German equivalent of the American Legion, quickly expressed fear destruction to their formation would follow.

However, Franz Seldte, Adolf Hitler's minister of the interior and founder and leader of the Stahlheim, finally located Der Fuehrer at Berchtesfaden and returned to Berlin with the conviction that Hitler would not tolerate further dissolution fo local Steel Helmet groups.

An indication of this was the action of the governor of Mecklenburg in withdrawing orders he had drawn for dissolution of Steel Helmets there.

Further action against the veterans was expected to be postponed until after the Nazi Party's September conclave, when unification of veterans' organizations, including the Stahlhelm, was considered likely to be decided.

Nevertheless, certain sections of the Nazi press openly attacked the Steel Helmeters, calling them tools of the "reactionary clique" and demanding their assimilation into one of the Nazi veterans' societies.

Reports of isolated priests who spoke against the government's anti-Catholic measures Sunday continued to reach Berlin. No arrests were reported.

Priest Reported Rebellious.

Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbel's newspaper, Der Agriff, reported that a priest at Stralsund, near Stettin, read a letter attacking Gen. Goering's decree against "political Catholicism." Headlines above the report read: "Church Against State—Unbelievable Incident."

A Nazi Government ban fell on the German-American Jesuit priest, Father John Asmenn, who by order of Minister of the Interior, Wilhelm Frick must leave Germany for Poland early in August. Father Asmenn fell into Nazi disfavor at Oppeln because he opposed the new paganism.

Streicher's address provided the high note of the anti-Jewish campaign which today involved some 500 Jewish children between the ages of 6 and 14, who, after incurring the ire of their Aryan playfellows, were told by social welfare workers that they could no longer go with other children of the poor to the sports grounds they have been visiting during the summer.

"Now must the conscience of the German people be awakened to realization of the existence of the Jewish problem," Streicher proclaimed, "so that laws which sometime must come will already have a foundation."

By the Associated Press.

A bill to make it a penal offense to send through the mails any publication "designed to cause racial or religious hatred or bigotry," was introduced yesterday by Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York.

He said reported circulation of a Nazi propaganda newspaper in New York City prompted the bill, which provides a fine of $5,000, five-year imprisonment, or both.

Dickstein said a publication from Nuremberg, Germany, received in his district "apparently through the mails," contained "invectives against Jews." He added the paper probably was circulated "throughout the country."

Wallace Gets Broad Power By AAA Vote

Mnay New Deal Critics Join Victors in Record Ballot of 64 to 15.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's complex AAA amendments, drastically modified but still carrying many of the broad powers sought by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, yesterday were passed by the Senate after 11 days of turbulent debate.

Approval came on an overwhelming 64 to 15 record ballot, with many of the Senators most active in criticizing New Deal farm policies voting for the bill.

Substituting a new system of marketing orders for licensing provisions brought into question by the Supreme Court's NRA decision, "freezing" processing taxes into law, and setting up new formulas for their continuance once parity prices are reached, the bill seeks to gird the New Deal's farm program against coming constitutional tests.

Before the final vote, Senators strengthened their patronage foothold with an amendment requiring Senate approval of high-salaried appointees in every Government agency. The Administration's controversial banking bill was made the chamber's unfinished business, immediately after the vote.

Wallace Theories Embodied.

Sweeping to passage with the amendments were extensions of the Bankhead cotton control act, the Smith-Kerr tobacco control act, and a bill covering potatoes in the basic commodity control program. Theories cherished by Wallace for years—including his ever-normal granary plan for storing away surplus produce in fat years—were embodied.

But over the whole program hung the shadow of an approaching Supreme Court test—rendered not far distant by the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals decision in the Hoosac Mills case, holding processing taxes unconstitutional. AAA officials sought to guard against this, too, through an amendment prohibiting suits for processing tax recovery. Farm program opponents blocked the attempt. They modified the amendment to permit suits wherever processors could show they had not been able to pass along the tax.

Administration leaders late yesterday, however, succeeded in incorporating a requirement that processors throw open their books for inspection when they seek recovery of the tax.

Split-Up of Vote.

Fifty Democrats voted with 12 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite for final passage. Only nine Democrats and six Republicans voted "No."

But the vote did not tell the whole story. Voting for passage were such Senators as George, of Georgia; Bailey, of North Carolina, and Clark, of Missouri, dominantly critical of many features of the bill, and even Huey Long, who arose to say he was "ashamed" of his vote. Paired for the bill were such AAA opponents as Senators Byrd and Glass, of Virginia.

Off the floor explanations were varied. Many Democratic critics took the view that they had modified the bill as much or more than they had hoped; that the Administration having embarked on the program should not be called off in midstream; and, finally, that the Supreme Court in the end will define its constitutional limitations anyway.

Bills Go to Conference.

A much stronger bill already has passed the House, and the two versions now go to conference for the working out of differences.

As passed by the Senate, marketing "orders" of Secretary Wallace may cover milk, pecans, walnuts, fruits, not including apples or fruits for canning, except olives; tobacco, naval stores, soybeans and vegetables, not including vegetables for canning, except asparagus.

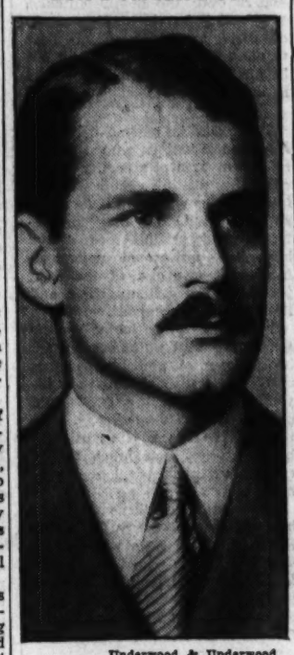
Roosevelt Shifts Pearson, Names Aid Island Head

Gets Pearson Post



Underwood & Underwood.
LAWRENCE CRAMER.

Judge Wilson Also Is Transferred, Feud Ended Abruptly.

Cramer Is Chosen To Govern Group

Ickes Noncommital As Nominations Are Announced.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday abruptly ended the heated controversy which has raged over administration of the Virgin Islands by transferring to other posts Paul M. Pearson and T. Webber Wilson, governor and Federal district judge, respectively, of the insular possession.

Simultaneously, the President announced the appointment of Lieut. Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer, of St. Croix, one of the Virgin Island group, to succeed Pearson. His nomination was sent to the Senate late in the day. It is expected that he will be questioned by the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs Committee, investigating the Virgin Island government, and that his appearance will end the inquiry.

Pearson was transferred to PWA with the title of assistant director of housing in charge of public welfare—a new post, paying $8,000 a year, the same salary he received as Governor of the Virgin Islands. He accepted the new appointment. Wilson, requesting a transfer, was named to the Federal Board of Parole.

Controversy Ends.

Removal of the two men from their Virgin Islands post terminated a controversy which several weeks ago jeopardized Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes' place in the Cabinet. Ickes was a stanch supporter of Pearson and became embroiled in a rough-and-tumble dispute with Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs Committee.

A target for sharp criticism within several months after former President Hoover in 1931 named him as the first American civilian governor of the Virgin Islands, Pearson, however, was retained when the Roosevelt Administration came into power, chiefly through the insistence of Secretary Ickes.

Attacks Bitter.

Attacks on Pearson reached a bitter point within the last year after Paul C. Yates, former executive assistant to the Governor, formally accused the latter of incompetency and inefficiency. Joining in the attack on Pearson was Eli Baer, ousted as special government attorney in the islands, and Charles H. Gibson, Baer's predecessor.

These charges along with petitions from the island populace asking Pearson's removal caused the Senate to order an inquiry. Ickes came to Pearson's defense and accused the Tydings committee of seeking to "whitewash" Judge Wilson at the expense of the Governor. The Marylander scathingly denounced the Interior Secretary for attempting to interfere with a Senate inquiry.

After the eruption between Ickes and Tydings, the hearings were suspended for two weeks, being resumed Monday. President Roosevelt sent for both Tydings and Ickes and reports immediately began to circulate that Pearson would resign. Despite constant denial of such reports they persisted with the climax in effect confirming them yesterday.

Open Hearing Set.

They were incorrect technically, in that Pearson did not resign. In effect the President summarily removed him. Earlier in the day Pearson denied he had any intention of resigning and asserted he expected to return to the islands in the capacitl of governor. Secretary Ickes also said he had heard nothing to indicate that Pearson would resign.

At the very moment the two officials were speaking, a letter was on its way from the President to Pearson suggesting that "you may wish to transfer to another field of service" and urging him to ac-

British Threat To Bolt League Hinges on War

Report Says England Will Drop Out if Council Can't Halt Italy.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 23.—Threats that Great Britain would quit the League of Nations if other members allow Italy to war on Ethiopia were reported tonight as League Secretary-General Joseph Avenol arrived from Geneva to put in motion machinery summoning the council to special session to intervene in East Africa.

The British threat reportedly was used in diplomatic negotiations between London and other capitals. It brought a distinct change in the French viewpoint, hitherto inclined to permit Premier Benito Mussolini to take whatever action he wished in Ethiopia.

Britain reportedly claimed that if the league shirked its duty under the covenant and Italy warred on Ethiopia, precedent would be created for aggressive action by any nation.

To Set Date Friday.

Britain already has started on the path of bilateral agreements through her naval pact with Germany. Should she quit the league it was believed she would abandon the system of collective security and push through other bilateral pacts.

Date for the council's session will be set Friday when its president, Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, arrives to confer with Avenol and Premier Pierre Laval.

Avenol's arrival coincided with agreement between Laval and Sir George Clerk, British ambassador to France, as to procedure involved in summoning the council into special session.

It became increasingly evident that the French now realize the need of maintaining the prestige of the league covenant in all diplomatic efforts to settle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Britain contends that the league would be rendered a useless institution if the prestige of the covenant is not maintained. She fought the long-threatened breakdown in

General Strike Ends Quietly In Terre Haute After 2 Days

By the United Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 23.—The general strike which has paralyzed business and industry in Terre Haute the last two days ended abruptly tonight.

The end of the tie-up came when Max Schaeffer, vice president of the Central Labor Union, announced a truce had been reached between employes and officials of the Columbian Enameling & Stamping plant. The walkout of 600 stamping plant employes precipitated the general labor holiday.

Efforts of Federal Conciliators Charles L. Richardson and Harry E. Scheck were believed instrumental in effecting a settlement. Richardson flew here from Washington and Scheck from Chicago. They went into coference immediately with T. N. Taylor, president of the State Federation of Labor; L. G. Brown, enamel works president, and company officials.

Pending outcome of their negotiations, the city had been placed under martial law by Gov. Paul V. McNutt when city officials admitted inability to cope with the strikers.

Today the National Guard had resorted to bullets to enforce martial law. Rifle fire punctured the tire of an automobile which sped past a sentry line near the militia armory, disregarding "stop" signals. The driver fled on foot.

A semblance of order was restored to the strike-torn city of 65,000 after State militia, prohibiting picketing and assemblages, had dispersed crowds at the enameling plant with tear gas and arrested 55 persons. Those arrested were held in the Vigo County jail, guarded by the troops. They will be given a hearing before a military court.

House Debates Impeachement Of Roosevelt

Argument Ends in Applause as Oregonian Denies Casting 'Slurs.'

By the Associated Press.

The House consumed a feverish hour yesterday wrangling over whether President Roosevelt should be impeached and then wound up applauding a man who said he didn't really mean a colleague was a "snooper" or "stool pigeon."

The springboard for the argument was an interview by Representative Fish (Republican), New York, in which he said he thought that "if" the President were impeached, the Speaker of the House and Democratic House leaders ought to be treated the same way. Republican Leader Snell had suggested Mr. Roosevelt was on the "border line" of impeachment grounds.

Representative Warren (Democrat), North Carolina, his bristly black hair almost standing on end, took the floor to talk ten minutes about "slurs and insinuations." He added:

"Ever since the gentleman (Fish) became the Republican presidential candidate of Congressman Knutson, of Minnesota, and former Congressman DePriest, he seems to have lost all sense of proportoin and frankly many of us doubt if he even knows what is going on in the House.

Hurling Neither.

"I don't think the gentleman from New York is hurting either the Speaker or the President."

Up jumped slender Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to shout that "Roosevelt is a Socialist, and not a Democrat." He implied that he thought the President should be impeached.

Then Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, walked in, to insist "it is evident to me that the President has violated the Constitution on one or more occasions."

"I said," he explained, "that it would be most unwise and foolish to introduce a resolution to impeach the President for acts for which Congress itself was far more responsible. The House itself, the Speaker and the leaders are the ones responsible much more than the President * * *

"The President has usurped the powers of Congress and it is time somebody called a halt."

Lose Self Respect.

Representative McCormick (Democrat), Massachusetts, remarked that when members "enter into the field of unfair and unwarranted attack and argument" they lose respect. Fish, he said, was "guilty of that crime" several days ago when he used the word "snoop" in talking about Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas. McCormack reminded that the word had been stricken from the record by a vote of the House.

The Republicans tried to do the same thing about McCormack's speech, but they failed, 165 to 35, on a partisan vote.

Then Representative Ekwall (Republican), Oregon, broke in. He reminded that his assertions about "snooper" and "stool pigeon" in the Patman-Fish debate several days ago also were expunged from the record.

"I thought everyone knew I was just trying to pour a little oil on troubled waters then," Ekwall said. "I had no feeling against the gentleman from Texas (Patman)."

The Democrats applauded, Ekwall sat down, and the fun was over.

Exemptions Set For Closest Kin In Wealth Levy

in a room adjoining the Ways and Means Committee for word of what was accomplished. Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, sent a mesenger to usher them out into the corridor.

When he finally emerged, Doughton declined to comment on what was done. It was learned, however, that in addition to agreeing on the $10,000 and $50,000 exemptions, the Democrats also had accepted one of the mildest of 14 schedules suggested for the new inheritance taxes.

Under this schedule, which will be put in a tentative bill soon, the inheritance tax would start at 4 per cent on the first $10,000 above the $50,000 exemption and rise by steps to a maximum of 75 per cent on inheritances exceeding $10,000,000.

The 4 per cent levy would mean a tax of $400, or 0.67 per cent, on a $60,000 inheritance, and a tax of $5,889,600, of 58.9 per cent, on a $10,000,000 inheritance.

The detailed rates for the tax have not been decided upon, but the understanding was that they would start at 4 per cent on the first $10,000 over the $10,000 exemption and increase gradually to the same 75 per cent level as the "next of kin" rates.

False Alarm to Seek Aid Earns Jail Sentence

"The next time anyone tries to beat you up call the police and not the fire department."

With these words and an added "$50 or 60 days" Judge Robert E. Mattingly admonished Louis Williams, colored, yesterday when he was arraigned in Police Court on a charge of pulling a false fire alarm.

Williams testified he was going home past Fourth street and Independence avenue southwest last week when he was set upon by a gang of boys. Not knowing what to do and thinking the fire alarm box on the corner would bring him help he summoned the apparatus.

Policeman E. H. Hoden, of the Fourth Precinct, standing nearby, saw the alarm pulled and arrested Williams.

Black Steals the Lobby Probe Show; The Good Old Times Abroad; Political Parade.

By Raymond Clapper

If the death sentence finally goes into the utilities bill it will be another notch in the gun of Senator Hugo Black. Mr. Roosevelt and his fleet-footed agents stirred up every vote they could find, but fell far short. Now Senator Black is trying the job through his lobby inquiry.

While he does his stuff in the Senate lobby investigation, the House and Senate conferees, charged with the task of reconciling differences between the two houses over the death sentence, are stalling for time. They count on Black to put on enough heat to melt the opposition, as he did in his ship subsidy and air-mail investigations.

This slight, youngish-looking Alabama Senator, who has the steel-trap flash of a county prosecutor, has utilities agents who are hauled up as witnesses before him so frightened that they instinctively address him as "your honor." A uniformed policeman towers at one end of the dais, just over the witness chair and its squirming occupant.

While the House lobby investigators are still puttering around hiring counsel and investigators and incidentally delaying their investigation until the excitement cools off, Black is moving in. Representatives are chasing over to him with hot tips, much to the chagrin of the House lobby committee.

As a result of these tips, the best of which came from the House side, the Senate investigation already has wiped out the effect of the powerful utilities campaign which produced such surprisingly successful results in the House vote on the death sentence.

First, Black disclosed how in Warren, Pa., the utilities people flooded the Representative from that district with fake telegrams signed with names taken out of the city directory in alphebetical order.

Then he showed how in York, Pa., hundreds of telegrams were sent with names taken not only from the utilities payrolls, but from the lists of employes of the street car company. And when a newspaper reporter wrote a dispatch to a Philadelphia newspaper about it, the utilities agents tracked him down through the telegraph company files and went to his full-time newspaper employer in York about it. Telegrams were signed with names of persons dead or departed.

All of this probably is not as shocking to members of Congress as to the public generally. Those old-timers in politics have been receiving artificial barrages of the same sort for years. Also, not a few of them have seen the tombstones and vacant lots voted on election day. But it is now a good deal harder for a Democrat to stand up and vote to commute a death sentence to life imprisonment in order to spare the people who have been doing these things.

One utilities agent testified before the Black committee that a utility stock with which he was familiar had doubled in value since the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was introduced. It has gone from 25 cents up to 50 cents. Customers bought it for as much as $70 a few years ago. Black is pulling that sort of testimony out of the witnesses as he goes along.

In foreign affairs, if not domestically, we are getting back to normalcy. Mussolini has torn the Kellogg pact to shreds. The naval limitations program has been kicked over by Japan and England. Italians are accusing the Japanese of supplying dope from Ethiopia to American boys. And, the surest sign of all, Ethiopia is hinting that she would like a war loan from American bankers. That last really sounds like old times.

Political Parade: Joseph Lieb, organizer of one of the first Roosevelt-for-President clubs, receives this letter from Gene Tunney, 230 Park avenue, New York City: "Certainly, I believe that President Franklin Delano Roosevelt will be reelected President in 1936. Though he has ostracized many very well-to-do, and some well-to-do people, I believe he has made two friends among the masses for each of the above he has lost." That's that . . . Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who used to be a newspaperman himself and ought to know better, never batted an eye when he denied to reporters that Paul Pearson, his subordinate, was resigning as Governor of the Virgin Islands, although the official announcement was almost at that moment on its way to the White House mimeograph. But let it pass. Washington reporters are used to it . . . If one of those reporters had decided the other way a few years ago, he might now be Governor of the Virgin Islands instead of having to wrestle with tricky official denials. He was asked to be lieutenant governor under Gov. Pearson but declined. The man who did take the job has stepped into Pearson's shoes . . . Copies of a decision by a Middle Western probate judge directing trustees to invest funds of an estate in real estate mortgages instead of Government bonds are coming into Washington privately by way of New York. The decision is a hair-curling indictment of the Administration fiscal policy, which is too hot for anything but asbestos paper . . . Senator Carter Glass goes into his banking bill fight with a private tip that the amendments offered by Chairman Fletcher, which would restore some of the Administration ideas, won't be pressed . . . Nobody but the House favors the new FACA bill putting liquor control under the Treasury, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau fighting it hardest of all . . . So many Senators and Representatives are planning to slip away on vacation trips that leaders are worried about being able to hold a quorum. Some have booked steamship passage and intend to sail regardless of Roosevelt or high water.

Over 10,000	75	.....	.....

Similar rates will be drafted later, to apply to those who are not widows, sons, daughters, adopted children, grandchildren, brothers, sisters, and parents. The exemption will be $10,000 instead of $50,000.

1 Drowned, 1 Burned In Explosion on Yacht

Savannah, Ga., July 23 (AP).—Capt. A. Lowery, of the yacht Hoosier VI was drowned, and another man severely burned today as an explosion swept the 50-foot craft shortly after it took on 600 gallons of gasoline.

At a hospital here, the injured man was listed as Millard Gale, of Brunswick.

The owner of the yacht, R. M. Demere, of Savannah, rushed to the scene at once. He said the captain, who was on the bridge deck had called to Gale to pull a charging plant switch, and that the explosion came at once. Lowery jumped into the river while Gale, in the engine room was hurled into the water. He swam ashore unassisted. Capt. Lowery went down, close by the dock. His body was recovered late today.

Move Forecast To DevelopNew Limit on Navies

U. S. Ready for Scrapping of Ratios; Wants Equality of Security.

By the Associated Press.

he possibility of early diplomatic overtures toward a naval limitations compromise was seen by observers yesterday as an outgrowth of rGeat Britain's abandonment of the ratio method of limitation.

American officials would venture no opinion, however, as to wether a renewed attempt to solve the naval problem would be made in a formal conference, discussions similar to the most recent London naval talks, or through the usual channels of diplomatic negotiation.

The United States, it was learned authoritatively, however, is not opposed to substituting some other yardstick of relative naval strength for the figurative ratio (5—5—3 in this case) which wounded Japan's national pride so deeply it abrogated the Washington Treaty.

Some significance was attached to a White House call yesterday by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations. Standley reported his talk with the President was centered on routine Navy matters. Speculation continued, nevertheles, that the British move and the general naval situation had entered into the conference.

Announcement by the British the contentious ratio system over-admiralty that it was throwing board and would seek other means to achieve limitation of naval strength came without forewarning, but was not entirely unexpected.

American officials are known to have anticipated a compromise proposal from the British—based on announced programs designed to insure "security" and eliminate mathematical ratios.

roving envoy, who represented the United States in the London talks last December, made clear at that time that the American Government did not insist on continuance of the 5-5-3 ratio but did advocate limitation by some system which would provide "equality of security."

Great Britain, which took the lead in calling the London talks, has made known it will take the initiative in calling another naval meeting, as provided in the Washington Treaty, "as soon as the opportune moment arrives."

The British government has not yet, however, issued any invitations for a new meeting and no conference, time or place, has been suggested by any of the interested sea powers.

The Washington and London naval limitation treaties end on December 31, 1936, and, unless a new agreement is achieved before the expiration of those pacts, there will be no international understanding limiting the size and strength of the world's navies.

Perkins Predicts Guffey Bill Step

Says Coal Measure Will Be Reported Soon.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins said at her press conference yesterday she had been told a Ways and Means subcommittee would report out the Guffey coal stabilization bill "within a day or so."

The Labor Department chief said she was keeping in close touch with the soft coal situation. She arranged the last of three strike truces in this industry to give Congress time to act on the Guffey bill, designed to set up a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry.

"Most of the operators and all of the miners believe that enactment of the Guffey bill would simplify the maknig of a bargain (on wages and hours) for the next eight months," Miss Perkins said.

Winship Boards Plane For Washington Parley

San Juan, P. R., July 23 (U.P.).—Gov. Blanton Winship left unexpectedly for Washington by airplane for Washington today. It was believed he planned to consult Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, on the advisability of signing enabling reconstruction legislation, passed by the special session.

Winship said he would return within two weeks, but there was general speculation as to whether he intends to resign. Before leaving he cut the budget more than $800,000, leaving 1935-36 expenditures at approximately $11,000,000.

HAROLD M. STEPHENS,

Stephens Gets Appointment To Bench Here

Harold M. Stephens, a "dark horse," was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to fill the vacancy on the bench of the District Court of Appeals left by the death of Associate Justice William Hitz.

Heartily indorsed by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and Senator William H. King, of Utah, Stephens had scarcely established himself in his new office as assistant to the Attorney General.

The Senate confirmed his appointment as Cummings' first assistant on July 3, the same day that Justice Hitz died. Chief of the Department of Justice anti-trust division prior to July 5, when his promotion as successor to William Stanley took effect, Stephens was "one of the best judges we've had," in the opinion of Senator King.

His reference yesterday was to the Western lawyer's service on the Third Judicial Court of Utah from 1917 to 1921. Although he was born in Nebraska, Stephens is a Utah man by education, residence and professional practice. He was admitted to the State bar in 1912, the same year he married Virginia Adele Bush, of Salt Lake City.

Senator King and Senator William Borah, of Idaho, comprise the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee which will report on the nomination.

'A better man could not have been chosen for this vacancy," the former declared. The names of several prominent lawyers, both local and from outside, had been mentioned for the post but Stephens' was not among them.

Active for many years in Democratic politics, Stephens took office as an assistant attorney general on June 14, 1933. He is the author of "The Legal Responsibility of Hospitals," "What Courts Can Learn From Commissions" and "Administrative Tribunals and the Rules of Evidence."

The Court of Appeals, which is in summer recess, will resume sittings early in October.

Mercury Hits 96, Heat to Continue Possible Showers Won't Lower Temperature.

Washington put in another sweltering day yesterday as the temperature soared to a maximum of 96 at 3:30 p. m., after starting from a minimum of 74 at 5 a. m.

The Weather Bureau predicted little change in the temperature for today, but the forecaster added that showers were possible this afternoon.

A sudden downpour drenched the streets during the afternoon, with violent thunder and lightning. No heat prostrations were reported to police or to the hospitals.

Fight on Sale Of Keg Liquor Closes House

Bulk Dispensing to Hotels Leads to Scrap in Which 'Whiskey Trust' Is Cried.

A battle over whether liquor should be sold to hotels and clubs in kegs and barrels so as to enable lower prices led the House to a hasty adjournment yesterday in the midst of consideration of the Federal Alcohol Administration bill.

Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, sponsored an amendment which would strike out a provision allowing the bulk sales. After being defeated on a voice vote and a division vote, he called for tellers.

Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, moved that the committee arise to end the filibuster. The House will resume today and probably pass the measure, which is designed to supplant the FACA with legislation which its drafters declare will be found constitutional.

Urge Rule Be Waived.

House Republican leaders, in one of the rare occasions of this session, suggested that a proposed two-hour debate on a special rule be waived after the Rules Committee had offered the rule. As a consequence the House began immediate consideration of the bill itself.

The scrap over the bulk sales provision brought several cries of "whisky trust" and "bootleggers."

Chairman O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, charged that the "whisky trust" was behind the move to keep liquor in bottles and maintain high prices.

"Some of us who voted to repeal the eighteenth amendment wouldn't raise a finger against it today," he said, "because the liquor business has gotten into the hands of monopolies."

Connery, who insisted that his amendment would increase employment, contended that the committee provision would encourage bootlegging and the substitution of cheap liquors.

Occupational Tax Defeated.

Members from Virginia objected that the bill contains no ban on the shipment of liquor into dry States, but committee members said such a statute was being considered by the Judiciary Committee.

The House eliminated a section providing a $10 occupational tax on persons engaged in the liquor industry. The provision had been inserted to give the Ways and Means Committee, rather than the Judiciary Committtee, control of the bill.

Amendments to forbid specifically the importation of liquor by dry States to wet States and to bar the use of imported black-strap molasses in the manufacture of alcohol or distilled spirits were defeated.

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, who took the floor to explain the rule, made an attack on the United State s Supreme Court for "usurpation" of legislative power, only to be called down on a point of order originating in the Democratic ranks.

Ickes Demands Project Heads Quit in Texas

$4,853,000 Loan to Water District Is Contingent on Resignations.

By the Associated Press.

Public Works officials said yesterday Secretary Ickes had demanded the resignation of all directors of the Willacy County, Tex., water control and improvement district No. 1, as a condition to release of a $4,853,000 allotment.

It was Ickes' first move in the matter since a District of Columbia court dismissed indictments charging fraud by several officials of the District and former PWA engineers.

PWA officials said Ickes had specified that the new board of directors be satisfactory to him and that several unnamed matters be settled "satisfactorily" before construction can begin.

Expectation that a general rule will be laid down shortly regarding reductions in the prevailing 4 per cent interest rate on PWA loans was expressed yesterday by Ickes.

Club on Banks Hinted.

He said at his press conference that he expected the rule to be formulated by a sub-committee of President Roosevelt's allotment board.

Asked if the proposed reduction was intended as a "club" on banks, which have been accused by some cities of charging excessive rates, Ickes said:

"The reduction might have the effect of persuading bankers to be satisfied with a reasonable interest rate. Make it a more reasonable rate—I'm feeling urbane this morning."

Under the work relief program, 45 per cent of the cost of PWA projects is donated by the Government, while cities and States must borrow the remaining 55 per cent either from private sources or from PWA's revolving fund.

Parks Service Asks $2,585,820.

The National Park Service yesterday applied for $2,585,820 in work relief funds to improve national parks and monuments to American heroes.

Perhaps the most famous of the monuments to be improved, if funds are granted, is the Statue of Liberty in New ork Harbor.

The announcement said $510,000 would be spent on "installation of a heating plant, repairing the statue porch, installation of a brass hand rail, safety treads, new pavement, ventilation of the interior, and removal of old, dilapidated buildings and docks and general improvement of facilities on the island."

he service proposed to spend $130,000 in buying additional land near the George Washington Birthplace National Monument in Virginia, and the Kill Devil Hill Monument, Kitty Hawk, N. C., which was the scene of Orville and Wilbur Wright's experimental flights.

$101,462,893 for New York City.

Aiming at the Nation's biggest pool of unemployment, the work relief allotment committee today recommended that President Roosevelt approved $101,462,893 for work relief spending in New York City.

In the busiest session since its first meeting, the committeee approved in al more than $250,000,000 of new projects.

In addition to theh uge New York City fund, indorsement was given to the spending of $33,388,991 in 13 States——both sums to be administered by Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator.

Another chunk of $71,000,000 was earmarked for the reclamation program, which recently was excepted from the works progress requirement that one man be put to work for every $1,143 spent.

he committee also recommended expenditure of $9,881,948 on three studies to be carried out by the Census Bureau, estimated to provide a year's work for 12,366 white collar workers at an average cost of about $798.

Franklin to Abandon Part of Game Refuge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 23.—Franklin County's 2,000-acre game refuge will be partially abandoned in the new set-up it was announced today by H. E. Clepper, district forester of the Mont Alto district. In place of the large tract five smaller refuges, each of 400 acres, will be established, giving refuge to all small game. One of these will be devoted to protection of wild turkey.

The new refuges are being developed by workers in civilian Conservation Camps and will be in the mountains bordering in Franklin and Adams counties.

Lobby Committee Probes Protest Telegrams

Fake Telegram Data Ordered By Wire Board

quiry for the first time since uncovering evidence of faked telegrams and burned records.

Entrance of the communications commission into the inquiry was welcomed by the Senate investigators because it is believed the commission will be able to uncover much that would be shielded from the lobby committee. The data was called for by the telegraph division, which has immediate control over the operations of the telegraph companies.

The information asked for by the commission, to be reported before August 15 and covering the period from January 1, 1935, to date, was requested as follows:

"1. Whether any telegrams addressed to members of the Congress or to the President were sent under circumstances which caused the local employes of the company to suspect that the telegrams were not sent with the knowledge or consent of the persons whose names were signed to them;

"2. Where any such telegrams were sent, complete information concerning the circumstances surrounding their sending;

"3. Whether any telegrams addressed to members of the Congress or to the President have, since their sending, been repudiated by the persons whose names were signed to them, so far as the local employes of the company were informed;

Brands Steel Claim False.

"4. Where such telegrams have been so repudiated, complete information concerning the circumstances surrounding their sending and repudiation;

"5. Whether the originals of any telegrams were destroyed or otherwise disposed of before the expiration of the full period for which they are required to be kept; and

"6. Where such telegrams were so destroyed or disposed of, the circumstances surrounding such destruction and disposition."

Senator Schwellenbach's attack on statistics released by the Steel Institute came at the close of the day's hearings. Senator Black had previously announced that the committee would turn its attention to lobbying efforts against the Administration tax programs as soon as it concludes the power lobby inquiry.

After reading from the article in which Steel Facts, an organ of the Steel Institute, was quoted. Schwellenbach charged as "palpably false" the statement that 68 cents of "every steel dollar" already goes to taxes.

Declaring that the tax figure was reckoned out of the net income, whereas it would be only 4.5 per cent of the gross income, the Senator said:

"It is an effort on the part of those behind the article to influence Congress to believe that such is the case in connection with the deliberations on the pending tax legislation.

"It is palpably fraudulent and I believe it is something that this committee should investigate. When we get through with the utilities bill, I am going to ask that the committee call in the people from the steel industry and other branches of business which are seeking to influence this tax legislation."

Black commented that "the committee will take that up when the time comes."

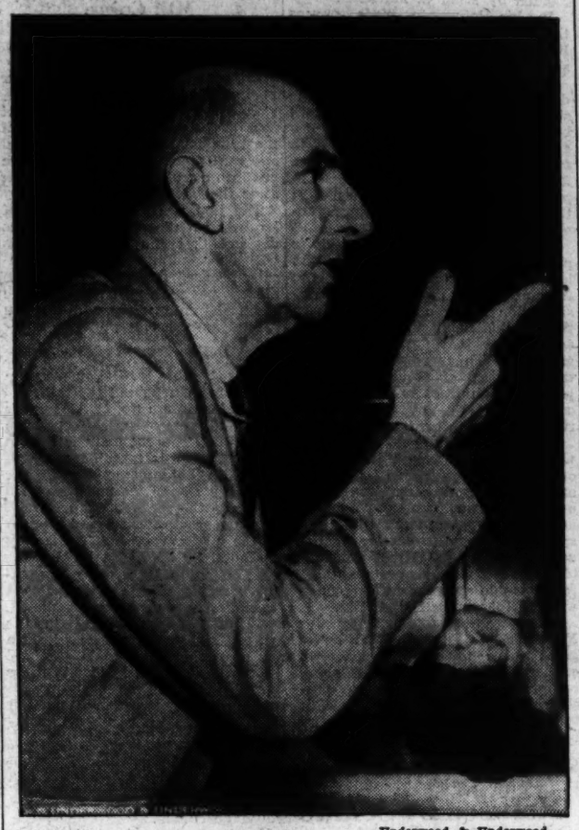
Gibson "Sorry" for Underlings.

Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, revealed the goal of the committee, when after pressing Quay C. Haller, the principal utility witness, to admit that all of his actions had been done under orders, observed:

"We are sincerely sorry for you fellows in the lower brackets. We are trying to reach the officials in the topmost brackets."

Haller had previously admitted his part in the transmission of 700 telegrams opposing the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, in which the payroll list of the York street railway was used to obtain names, together with those of their relatives and beneficiaries, all obtained from office files.

More than 1,000 letters were similarly sent, but Haller insisted that signatures were obtained in this case by "just passing around" the typed letters among employes with the request that they be signed.



Underwood & Underwood.

Luther A. Coleman, veteran manager of Postal Telegraph's York, Pa., office, testifies that one of the telegrams protesting the Wheeler-Rayburn bill was "signed" by a man dead for two years.

Senator Black called upon W. F. McDowell, of York, a grey and bespectacled man, to disavow signing or authorizing any one to sign his name to a telegram which said: "Call a halt to unsound legislation. Vote against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill."

The telegram, as well as most of the others, went to Representative Haines (Democrat), representing the York district.

McDowell added that he wouldn't have "voted" that way if he had been given an opportunity, as he favored the purpose of the holding company bill.

It was Luther A. Coleman, Postal Telegraph manager at York, who disclosed that one of the messages had been from the dead. Asked by Senator Black to identify any of the signatures on a batch of telegrams, Coleman said he knew one—Charles E. Small.

"Is he living or dead?" asked Black.

"He's dead," said Coleman, adding that he had been dead about two years.

Story Not in York Newspaper.

Robert J. Lewis, York correspondent for the Philadelphia Record, whose story of the Haller telegrams led the Senate committee to invesigate, took the stand during the afternoon. Denying that he had obtained his information from the telegraph office managers, he said much of it came from the Metropolitan Edison Co., in whose offices the messages were written and signed.

Haller subsequently admitted making an inquiry about the origin of the Record story after receiving a call from his superior, J. J. Burns, of Reading, Pa. He then called upon the editor of the York Dispatch, on which Lewis is a reporter, but denied asking for Lewis' dismissal under threat of withdrawing advertising. He likewise denied that he had said Lewis is "a radical and dangerous."

Senator Gibson apparently derived much amusement from asking Lewis why his story did not appear in the York Dispatch. Lewis said he "just hadn't been assigned to write such a story." He admitted that he hadn't read the paper's editorials and consequently didn't know how it stood on the utility issue.

Haller explained at some length how the 1,800 telegrams he sent originated. An agent of the Metropolitan Edison Co., a subsidiary of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., he had "only a chair in an office" until the campaign against the utility bill began. Then he had stenographers and clerks working for him.

E. A. Barnitz, vice president of the York Railway Co., a former Insull property, turned over the names of 700 employes with authorization to use their signatures on anti-Wheeler-Rayburn bill messages. The names were to be used "unless there was opposition."

"How would that opposition be expressed?" asked Black.

"They would have to tell their foreman," replied Haller.

The telegrams were charged by the Postal office to the account of "the Stockholders and Bondholders Committee," it was disclosed, although there is no such organization in York and the name was suggested by the obliging Postal manager, after Haller had asked that the Metropolitan Edison Co. not be involved.

By the United Press.

New York, July 23.—The Edison Electric Institute has spent $256,749.76 in opposing proposed Federal legislation which it regards as harmful to the industry, its president, Thomas N. McCarter, reported today.

McCarter said the institute had retained Newton D. Baker and James M. Beck, at a cost of $35,000, to pass upon the constitutionality of the proposed governmental projects, such as that inaugurated by the TVA.

On the basis of the opinion submitted by Baker and Beck, the institute paid $50,000 to the firm of Cabaniss and Johnston, of Birmingham, Ala., in the case of Ashwander versus Tennessee Valley Authority.

Opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, McCarter said, was largely conducted by the committee of public utility executives, headed by Philip H. Gadsen. To aid this committee, the institute paid fees of $75,000 each to the law firms of Simpson, Thatcher and Bartlett and Sullivan and Cromwell. In addition, the institute spent $19,757.47 for official transcripts and Government documents and miscellaneous expenses.

Group to Ask President's Aid For 800 Planes

Sub-committee of House to Seek 40 Millions for Army Corps.

By the Associated Press.

An agreement to seek immediate presidential support for a $40,000,000 appropriation for upward of 800 Army airplanes was reached yesterday at a secret meeting of a House military sub-committee.

The sub-committee instructed Chairman Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, to place before the President facts and figures showing the "absolute necessity" for the additional planes.

"We believe that will be the quickest and surest way of getting action on our demands that the Army air corps be built up toward its proper strength," Rogers said.

"With the facts before him, we feel reasonably sure the President will instruct the Budget Director to inform Congress of the need for the extra $40,000,000 and that would clear the way for placing it in the second deficiency appropriation bill."

Rogers ws armed with figures intended to show that in fighting planes alone the Air Corps is more than 50 per cent behind the minimum needs for national defense as recommended by a special investigative board headed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War. With approximately 585 serviceable bombing, pursuit and attack planes, he said, the corps is about 625 short of the Baker board figure.

While the board recommended 2,320 planes of all types for the corps, the present number of ships in first-class flying condition is only about 1,200, Rogers said, adding that about a third of these will become obsolete or be lost through accidents in the present fiscal year.

Rogers said Secretary Dern, Assistant Secretary Woodring and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Army chief of staff, would be invited to accompany the House members to the White House. In addition to Rogers, the subcommittee includes Represenatives Hill (Democrat), Alabama; Harter (Democrat), Ohio; Plumley (Republican), Vermont, and McLean (Republican), New Jersey.

Remains of Old Indian Village Discovered in Pennsylvania

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Confluence, Pa., July 23.—An Indian village inhabited by 500 persons 1,500 years before the arrival of the white man has been revealed after 10 weeks of excavation on the Clause brothers' farm along the Youghiogheny River near Confluence. The discovery was made by Dr. Donald Cadzow, archaeologist connected with the Pennsylvania Historical Commission.

The early settlers undoubtedly were ancestors of the Iroquois and Algonquin Indians, who later migrated to the eastern part of the country, driven there probably by the bloody Indian tribal wars.

According to the report made to Deputy Director Walter Mong, of the RWD, whose workers did the excavating, the 500 lived in bark houses, constructed over pole supports. A circular fort, 100 feet in diameter, and palisades were discovered.

Inside the walls of the town, the skeleton of a young girl, with peculiar protruding teeth, was unearthed among other relics. The skull and jaw bones were kept for study and other parts of the skeleton reinterred.

Included in the "find" were five houses, two flint celts, one meteoric metal celt, a shorlstone, five pipes, 12 pipe stems, five bone awls, bone needle, two bone scrapers, two tusk pendants, one work tusk, one fragment stone tube, three conky stones, one gambling stone, 29 complete and broken arrow points, one stunning bone arrow point, 32 bone beads, one fish-bone awl, four filing scrapers, three flint knives, complete clay pot, one bone punch, pottery vessel, 16 refuse pits, five storage pits and seven fire pits.

French Banker Seizede at N. Y., After Failure

'Outrage,' Cries Neidecker at Paris Order; Claims U. S. Citizenship.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23 (AP).—Arrested at the request of the French surete, B. Coles Neidecker, international banker, denied tonight that there was any ground for criminal charges in connection with the closing of his bank in Paris last Thursday.

Neidecker's attorneys obtained a writ of habeas corpus a few hours after he was booked on a fugitive from justice charge but the hearing was delayed when court attaches were unable to locate the French consul general. Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey, who granted the writ, said he wished to have the consul general present during arguments.

No representative of the French government appeared and Judge Caffey paroled Neidecker into the custody of his attorney pending a further hearing on the writ Friday. The jurist refused to order an "unconditional release."

"Outrage," Protests Banker.

"This is an outrage," said Neidecker, head of the Travelers' Bank of Paris. "I have committed no crime. My books are all straight. If there is ground for anything at all, it is only civil action. And I am an American citizen, not a foreigner."

The 38-year-old banker, who went to Paris in 1916 and founded the institution after the war, told the police that the loss involved in the closing would not exceed $250,000. He said he came to the United States, arriving here Sunday, on the advice of counsel.

Police of Baltimore and Norfolk prepared to meet the liner City of Newport News and arrest Neidecker's two brothers, George and Aubrey, who were reported aboard. The ship, due in Norfolk tomorrow and in Baltimore Thursday, also was understood to be carrying Neidecker's wife and two children.

French authorities asked that all "money, bonds and baggage" found in possession of the family be seized.

Money "Went Out," He Asserts.

Police quoted Neidecker as saying that money "went out" of his bank and he was unable to account for it. He attributed the bank's difficulties to the fact that he had been confined to a hospital for seven months following an explosion aboard his yacht.

He wore a white knitted glove on his left hand, presumably to cover scars left by the burns which he suffered in the explosion.

The Paris authorities also requested the the arrest of George and Mary Barrett, whom they described as accomplices but neglected to identify.

Prior to his arrest, Neidecker had called himself "Peter" Neidecker and had said he was a brother of the then missing B. Coles Neidecker.

Among those who questioned him at police headquarters was Gen. John F. O'Ryan, former police commissioner, who is acting as attorney for certain depositors of the closed bank.

Job, Pay Roll Drop Reported for June

90,000 Fewer Workers in Seasonal Decline.

Drops in employment and payrolls in June were reported yesterday by the Labor Department.

A survey covering 50 per cent of all business and industry showed payrolls were $400,000 less than in May, with employment off 90,000. Although the month was the first since the Supreme Court wiped out NRA codes, Secretary Perkins said the survey should not be taken as an indication of what the loss of codes meant.

A drop in June is usual, Miss Perkins said, nine having been reported in the last 16 years.

Fatcory employment dropped 1.7 per cent, with a decline of 118,000 workers and a decrease of $4,100,000 in weekly payrolls.

Three groups of the non-manufacturing industries—wholesale and retail trade and hotels—reported employment declines.

Southern Phone President Dead

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, July 23.—Benjamin Stalker Read, 59, president of the Southern Bell Telephone Co. for the past 11 years, died at his home here today. Death followed an illness of six months.

He had served the Bell Co. for 45 years in Georgia, Tennesee, Kentucky, Louisiana and Missouri. At one time he was president of the Mountain States Telephont & Telegraph Co., with offices in Denver. In 1919, he was appointed director of commercial and rate matters for the Bell system under the United States Telephone & Telegraph Commission.

Read was elected president of the Southern Bell concern, succeeding J. Epps Brown, in June, 1924. Among those planning to attend the funeral, set for Thursday, are W. F. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., and Arthur W. Page, vice president, both of New York City.

Time and place of the funeral is to be announced later.

Senate Passes Amended AAA In Major Upset

New Deal Foes Join Victors as 64-15 Vote Gives Wallace Broad Powers.

ing "patronage" amendment affecting not only the AAA bill but every other act of Congress, was offered by Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, and accepted by Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee without debate.

The amendment requires Senate confirmation of all noncivil service Federal employes who are not attorneys, making over $7,500; of all administrative officers located in Washington drawing more than $6,000, and of all State or regional administrators earning over $3,600.

Opponent Score Twice.

Opponents of the bill scored notably on two points—first, in striking all price fixing provisions out of the measufe, and second, in leaving the doors of the courts open to suits to recover processing taxes, where it can be shown these have not been passed to producer or consumer.

A persistent drive to modify the Administration's reciprocal tariff bargaining program collapsed utterly, however. After an unsuccessful attempt Monday to provide for Senate ratification of trading agreements, opponents of the tariff program returned to the attack yesterday. A modification of Senator Pat McCarran's earlier amendment was tabled, 51 to 24; an attempt by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg to repeal the bargaining act was tabled by a voice vote; and an effort by Senator Robert D. Carey to bar tariff agreements affecting AAA basic commodities, was defeated 53 to 23.

Early in the week, however, an amendment by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, authorizing the President to fix import quotas, as a means of safeguarding price gains in basic commodities, was overwhelmingly approved.

Among other amendments approved in the Senate were:

A provision "legalizing and ratifying" AAA voluntary marketing agreements already negotiated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and sanctioning benefit payments to farmers.

"Freedom of the press" safeguards, prohibiting processing taxes on material entering into newsprint, and barring AAA interference with advertising of farm commodities.

Authorization for allotment of $50,000,000 from works funds for purchase of marginal lands, and appropriation of $40,000,000 for eradication of Bangs disease and tuberculosis among cattle.

New Formula Explained.

The new processing tax formula written into the bill by the Senate provides that when the parity price on any commodity is maintained for two months before the start of a marketing season, or ten months during a marketing season, processing taxes shall be reduced.

The tax is to equal 20 per cent of parity if the price is not more than 20 per cent over parity. If the price goes higher, the tax is to be cut to 10 per cent of parity. If this formula is adopted in conference, it may lead to reduction of tobacco taxes, and probable curtailment of taxes on pork and other commodities later on.

Secretary Wallace's ever normal granary plan retained in the bill permits buying up surpluses in bumper years and redistribution to farmers in lieu of benefits in lean years. Benefit payments in kind are prohibited, unless producers give their consent.

Outstanding among provisions discarded by the Senate is the House authorization for use of 30 per cent of all customs receipts to pay export subsidies, remove farm surpluses, finance rental and benefit payments for acreage production and make purchase of marginal land. The Cotton Textile Institute in vain requested that the Senate reconsider its rejection of this amendment.

Sidetracking of the virtual tattoo of proposals to repeal or modify the reciprocal tariff bargaining act followed a brisk floor skirmish on constitutionality of the tariff law.

Senator Vandenberg called on the Senate to "acknowledge" the unconstitutionality of the act, and "wipe it from the statutes without waiting for the Supreme Court."

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, pleaded with colleagues to decide the bill on its merits without injecting the tariff issue.

"We will be here for five years without adjournment, if we go into that," admonished the Nebraskan.

Schweitzer Jury Nearly Complete

Additional Panel to Be Called in Trial Today.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 23.—The first day of the trial of William C. Schweitzer, alias Lee Ferris, and his three woman companions for the slaying of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, ended today with 10 women and one man tentatively seated in the jury box.

The defense used 19 of its 60 premptory challenges. As the list of available jurors was exhausted when court recessed for the day deputies were preparing to bring in additional persons tomorrow. Judge John A. Boyne said a special panel will be called if necessary.

Schweitzer swaggered into court in new clothing. His companions on the ride which ended in the death of the New York lawyer—Florence and Loretta Jackson and Jean Miller—were also attired in new clothes of fashionable appearance.

Defense requests for delay were denied by the court. One defense argument was based on the nervous condition of the girls. This brought from the prosecutor the remark that, "These faints may be all right, but I understand they are pretty good actors, too."

Industry Asked To Aid Survey On NRA Codes

H. I. Harriman Is to Head Group Collecting Trade Data.

The Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce yesterday called on industry to cooperate in the NRA review division's survey of codified industries during the past two years as long as the survey is conducted in a spirit of not harassing industry.

To assist the survey the council selected a committee, headed by Henry I. Harriman, whose duty it shall be to "secure appropriate business cooperation." Members in addition to Harriman, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, are Robert M. Field, lawyer and writer, New York City; James W. Hook, president of Geometric Tool Co., New Haven, Conn.; Morris E. Leeds, president of Leeds and Northrup, Philadelphia; George H. Mead, president of Mead Corporation, New York City; and Walter White, formerly resident director and member of Industrial Advisory Board of NRA.

The NRA Division of Review is headed by Leon C. Marshall.

In his letter to trade groups throughout the county, Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the council, said:

"Believing that trade and industry are vitally interested in the study and that results obtained will be directly proportional to the degree to which groups are willing to furnish necessary statistics, the Business Advisory Council has appointed a committee to assist in the task of securing business cooperation.

"Mr. Marshall's objective study is planned ot be of use both to the industries concerned and to the Administration, particularly if consideration is given to new legislation in this field. The council has assurances that associations or groups which furnish statistics to the Division of Review will be given opportunities to examine and comment on any conclusions reached prior to being made public.

This gives assurance the review will not be conducted in a spirit of harassing members of industry, or of seeking special data to support a pre-determined policy. As long as the review is conducted in this spirit, the council urges industry to adopt a co-operative attitude toward reasonable requests by NRA for facts and statistics in connection with various industrial studies.

"The results obtained by the NRA Review Division will be of great value to our committee in connection with its own studies and recommendations concerning possible future legislation dealing with the relationship of Government to business."

Smoke Control Bill Refused by Senate

Conferees Reject House Action on Measures.

Concurrence in House amendments to bills for local smoke control and increased prostitution penalties was refused yesterday by the Senate.

Senators King, Copeland and Capper were named as Senate conferees on both measures.

The Senate disliked the action of the House in excluding vessels operating within the District from the smoke bill and in empowering judges to suspend sentences in prostitution cases. The fine for conviction of prostitution would be increased from $25 to $100.

No action was taken on the House amendments to the Senate bill liberalizing local divorce laws pending the return to Washington of Senator Copeland, now in New York.

Ibo Heads Homeward, Surprising Own Staff

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, todayETAOIN..... Mississippi, yesterday packed his senatorial toga away until next January, bid his first session of Congress goodby, jumped into his moderate-priced automobile and headed for his country place in Poplarville, Miss.

The "stormy petrel" of Mississippi politics made no announcement of his departure and his absence from his office was a surprise to some of the staff.

In his sudden absence it could not be learned directly whether he had tired of the extended session. His secretary, Mrs. Lula Wimberly, said the Senator would open an office at Poplarville.

'Midget Money' To Have Jingle All of Its Own

Mellon - Produced Metal Alloy Likely for New Mill Coins.

By the Associated Press.

Midget money may jingle in your pocket before summer is over.

Treasury officials said last night that if Congress votes approval of the plan for minting half-cent and one mill pieces, the coins could be put into circulation within a month after the law's enactment.

The jingle may have a sound of its own. While the Treasury has decided that the half-cent pieces will be "mostly copper——technically bronze," or just about like the present penny, a mill will be made of an aluminum alloy with its own special metalic clink.

Mellon Supplies Metal.

Thus Andrew W. Hellon may become the man behind the mill.

The Aluminum Co. of America is about the only source of virgin aluminum. The company is known as a "Mellon interest" because of the large holdings of the former Secretary of the Treasury and his family in the concern. Figuratively, this ownership would put Mellon in the position of helping supply the metal for the new midget coin.

An official said Secretary Morgenthau's message urging the coinage legislation was virtually completed, and would be forwarded to the House Coinage Committee within a day or two.

Experts estimated that three weeks' time will be necessary to cut the dies for the new pieces. An elaborate design is planned to combat any conterfeiting efforts.

Amount Unestimated.

Treasury officials would not estimate how much of the new money would be coined.

Merchants throughout the country will be solicited as to their needs.

Circulation will not be restricted to sections employing the sales tax.

Officials said coinage of the new pieces is not expected to interfere with the use of street car tokens, and similar non-negotiable pieces. They are, however, expected to replace sales tax tokens.

The seigniorage profit mentioned by Secretary Morgenthau was explained to represent the difference between the bullion value of the metals used in a coin and its face value as money. For example, a $10 purchase of copper bullion might be sufficient to coin $15 of half-cent pieces.

Theoretically, there are 8,000,000 half-cent pieces now in "circulation" in the United States.

Janet: If you will pool a $15 a month payment with me, I will make the down payment of only $40 on the 1930 Ford advertised in the classified section today. Joyce.

Anti-Sedition Foes Attacked By Committee

Military Chairman Denies Bill Curbs Free Speech in Press.

By the Associated Press.

Opponents of the Tydings-McCormack anti-sedition bill were charged yesterday with combating the measure more from "opposition to a safe and sound program of national defense" than from "zeal for freedom of speech and the press."

In a formal report recommending House passage of the bill, Chairman McSwain of the Military Committee, denied that the measure meant curtailment of either freedom of the speech or press.

The bill would make it a Federal crime to incite members of the Army or Navy to violation of law or the rules and regulations governing them.

"It must be carefully noted," the majority report said, "that this legislation is not addressed to propaganda circulating among the citizenry generally.

"It is addressed solely and exclusively to a sort of 'intellectual insulation against disloyalty' of the men who have specially contracted to be instantly prepared, in mind and in body for the defense of the Government of the United States against its foes * * * "

Since national defense forces are necessary, the report said, "we must punish those who deliberately seek by subtle and sinister persuasion to undermine the loyalty and sense of duty of our soldiers and sailors."

The bill was attacked in a minority report by Representatives Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, and Kvale (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, as a "direct and wanton" violation of the right of freedom of the press and of speech.

'Street Showers' Planned.

Frederick, Md., July 23 (AP).—Frederick children are to have their showers for the rest of the summer. Rising temperatures convinced city officials that the annual "street showers" should be started and the "shower" team will make its daily rounds in the future, visiting each community at least twice a week. Street showers are hooked to city hydrants.

Virgin Islands Dispute Ended By Roosevelt

President Shifts Pearson, Wilson, to Close Incident.

cept appointment in the housing division of PWA.

The Tydings committee met yesterday apparently with the intention of hearing Ickes, but the latter did not appear. Subsequently he said he had no invitation to appear. The committee recessed until this morning, when it will hold an executive session with Yates and Baer. In the afternoon it is proposed to hold an open hearing.

It is generally expected on Capitol Hill that before the inquiry is ended Ickes will be given an opportunity to defend Pearson, either orally or by filing a statement with the committee. Pearson, who has been severely attacked by several witnesses, has not appeared before the committee.

Solution of the Virgin Islands controversy by transferring two of the major figures in it to other departments is President Roosevelt's usual approach to such difficulties. He has transferred to lucrative posts a number of officials unable to work in harmony with their colleagues or lacking ability to do their jobs. In a recent instance Ewing Y. Mitchell, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, refused to accept a transfer to a post in RFC and was removed. He caused a three-day sensation by making charges against the Administration.

Ickes Noncommital.

Without waiting for a reply from Pearson, the President made the letter public and sent the Senate the nomination of his successor. Later in the day Ickes, leaving the White House, said Pearson would accept the housing post. He said the Cramer appointment was "satisfactory" to him. Asked whether he regarded the President's handling of the matter as a victory for him, Ickes replied: "You make your own interpretations."

The case of Judge Wilson was somewhat different. Early in the day he sent to the President a letter asserting that he wished to enable Mr. Roosevelt "to deal more easily with the situation and to carry out with less hindrance a reorganization of the government of the islands" and therefore was willing to be transferred to "some other suitable position."

The President sent Wilson a letter accepting this suggestion. Although in both letters the President gave both officials a clean bill of health by pointing out that the Senate inquiry had developed "no facts that reflect upon your honesty or integrity or devotion to duty," the letter to Wilson seemed more cordial. It ended with the phrase "with best wishes," which was absent from the letter to Pearson.

The White House announcement explained that Cramer, as Lieutenant Governor of St. Croix, "has rendered exceptional service." He was described as "familiar with local conditions." Cramer was directly in charge of St. Croix, an island about 20 miles from St. Thomas, the residence of the Governor, and his duties kept him there most of the time. Thus he did not become involved in the Ickes-Pearson-Wilson controversy, it was said. His appointment as Governor was recommended by Ickes, the White House explained.

Cramer is 37 years old, a graduate of Columbia University and the University of Wisconsin. He went to the Virgin Islands as Lieutenant Governor in 1931, when the Pearson regime was established, following the transfer of administration from the Navy to the Interior Department.

Letters Published.

The President's letter to Pearson was as follows:

"My dear Gov. Pearson:

"Though it is a source of satisfaction to know that the current investigation of the Virgin Islands has developed no facts that reflect upon your honesty, or integrity, or devotion to duty, yet you may wish to transfer to another field of service, to work under different conditions.

"Administrator Ickes tells me that he has offered you the position of assistant director of housing in charge of Public Welfare. This is a post of honor that ought particularly to appeal to you because it will give you a chance to assist in the social rehabilitation of those underprivileged citizens of ours who, on account of economic conditions, have been forced to live in slum areas. I am sure that this is the sort of a task that will engage the interest of a man with your background and concern for humanity.

"I want you to continue to be a member of my Administration. I, therefore, hope that you will accept the offer that Secretary Ickes has made you."

The following letter from the President also was given to Judge Wilson:

"My dear Judge Wilson:

"I am appreciative of the spirit and purpose of your letter.

"Your suggestion that you be transferred from your present post to another position in the Federal Government meets with my full approval. The Attorney General informs me that he has tendered to you, and I hope that you will accept, a place on the Federal Board of Parole. The work of the board is of major significance, and I am confident not only that you will find your duties congenial but that you will render the service in that post for which by training and experience you are adapted.

"I need not assure you that the current inquiry into conditions in the Virgin Islands has developed no fact that reflects upon the honesty, integrity, or devotion with which you have performed your duties as judge of the District Court. The arrangement you have suggested is consistent with my desire that you continue as a member of my Administration.

"With best wishes."

Judge Wilson's letter to the President was as follows:

"My dear Mr. President:

"I am conscious that the situation in the Virgin Islands requires prompt readjustment in the general public interest. No one can doubt your desire to give to their people the best that government can secure to them, and, knowing them as I do, I am sure you have their complete confidence.

"By numerous petitions and unanimous support of the local press I have been urged to retain my present position as judge of the district court. I am deeply appreciative of the sympathetic understanding of the people of the islands and their repeated expressions of confidence and good will. Unfortunate differences of opinion, however, have arisen in official quarters in the islands, the merits of which it is not appropriate for me to discuss. Their very existence must of necessity be a source of embarrassment to all concerned. Under these circumstances, it has occurred to me that it might enable you to deal more easily with the situation, and to carry out with less hindrance a reorganization of the government of the islands, if I should be transferred from my present post to some other suitable position in the Federal Government.

"I am making this suggestion in a sincere desire to render a difficult situation somewhat less difficult and to assist, insofar as I can, in the improvement of the status of a people for whom I have a very real affection. I am hopeful that this suggestion will meet with your approval.

"With every expression of loyalty and interest in the success of your administration."

Schultz Jailed During Trial; Resents Order

Beer Baron Must Give Up Hotel Suite for Cell, Judge Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Malone, N. Y., July 23.—Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer's second trial for income tax evasion got off to a flying—if surprising—start today with a Federal court order sending him to jail for the duration of the proceedings.

Further speed marked the selection of a jury to try the former Bronx beer dealer for evasion of income tax during prohibition. His first trial ended in disagreement in Syracuse in April.

Special Prosecutor Martin H. Conboy told the jury the Government's case would show that Schultz menaced police officers and tried to buy them off.

Took Attorney's Advice.

As he marched off to jail tonight, Schultz may have taken some comfort, however, from the outline of the defense case. One of his lawyers, Harold W. Main, of Malone, kept referring to his client as "that boy," and reminded the jury that Schultz was not denying he was in the beer business.

"We wil lshow," said Main, "that this boy neglected to pay his income taxes because an attorney advised him he didn't have to."

Conby contended that Schultz grossed $3,000,000 in 1929, 1930 and 1931. The Government charges evasion, however, only of a $92,000 tax on an income of about $480,000.

Then Conboy told how Dutch Schultz was apprehended by two policemen in New York on June 18, 1931.

Tried to Buy Way Out.

"He was attempting to menace the officers," Conboy declared. "Then he attempted to buy his way out."

One of the arresting officers shot and killed one of Schultz's companions on that occasion.

Schultz was highly agitated by Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant's unexpected jail order, and uncomfortable, too, because of the heat.

Since his arrival from Syracuse last week Schultz has hobnobbed with some of Malone's best-known citizens. He went to a ball game, was seen freely about the city and had a suite at a leading hotel.

Prisoner Dies Awaiting Patrol to Go to Jail

William Dooley, colored, 56, 1223 Six-and-a-half street northwest, dropped dead in the cell block in the Police Court Building at Sixth and D streets northwest yesterday. Dooley had been arrested for drunkenness, tried and found guilty, and was waiting for the patrol to take him to jail.

Thompson Tried In Girl's Slaying

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Peoria, Ill., July 23.—Staring straight ahead at a calendar on a courtroom wall, Gerald Thompson, 26, today heard the first jury panel selected to try him for the assault and slaying of Mildred Hallmark, 19.

Accepted as jurors were Charles Boyser, unemployed; James Belcher, electric light plant engineer; Carl Hausman, bartender, and Edward Holtsman, mechanic.

The selction of the panel closed the second day of the trial in Judge Joseph Daily's court, despite the monotony of questions asked by defense counsel and prosecution in jury selection, the courtroom was crowded.

Grim and uncompromising, John Hallmark, father of the victim and a worker in a tractor plant tool room where Thompson was employed, watched the proceedings.

Thompson, the State charges, attacked and killed Miss Hallmark after she had accepted a ride in his automobile while on her way home from a movie. Her body was found in a cemetery ditch a month ago.

Would-Be Wrecker Jailed.

Truckee, Calif., July 23.—Neil McCue, of Chicago, was sentenced to four months in jail or a fine of $500 today for an attempt to plunge a transcontinental motor bus containing 24 passengers, including his 11-year-old son, into Donner Lake. "I guess I wast just nuts," McCue said, confessing intoxication. He pleaded guilty to violation of a law which prohibits interference with the driver of a motor vehicle while it is in motion.

Data on Trade Pacts, Practic Issued by Peek

No Comment With Tabulation, but It Is Viewed as Blow at Hull's Program.

Indicating the difficulties which confront the United States in its efforts to revive foreign trade on the unconditional most-favored-nation principle, George N. Peek, president of the Export-Import Bank, yesterday made public a factual tabulation of exclusive bilateral agreements, unilateral measures and practices now in force throughout the world.

The Peek tabulation was not accompanied by comment, except that it pointed out that the benefits of the 290 exclusive bilateral agreements listed "do not accrue to the United States." But it was apparently aimed as another attack by him on the Hull reciprocal trade agreement program.

Peek has been an advocate of bilateral trade agreements, including barter deals. A bilateral agreement is one between two countries and in th cases listed in the tabulation the benefits which each country gives to the other are not extended to the United States.

Hull's Program.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in his reciprocal trade program, has been negotiating bilateral trade agreements, but such pacts are based on the understanding that whatever benefits are given to any country will be extended by the United States to any third country which does not discriminate against Americans and their trade. This is the unconditional most-favored-nation principle, the heart of the Hull program.

Some months ago the controversy between Hull and Peek reached a point of heat, although neither referred personally to the other in thir speeches and statements. At that ime Peek had the title of special foreign trade adviser to the President, a post abolished as a result of the invalidation of the NRA, under which authority it was created. Peek, however, remained president of the Export-Import ank.

The statement from Peek's office yesterday, the first since he was stripped of his title of adviser to the President, was not denunciatory or sensational in any way. It was drafted, not for popular reading, but for the consideration of economists and trade experts as evidence of the barriers, almost insurmountable barriers, in the way of the reciprocal trade program.

For instance, the statement pointed out that of the 32 nations with unconditional most-favored-nation commitments with the United States, only 12 do not enter into exclusive bilateral agreements. These nations were listed as China, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Guatemala, Honduras, Haiti, Morocco, Muscat, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Saudi Arabia and Siam—all unimportant trading nations, with hte possible exception of China.

Others Active.

The other 20 countries with unconditional commitments to the United States entered into more than two-thirds of the 290 bilateral agreements listed, the statement explained.

The compilation then, in alphabetical order, lists the unilateral measures, bilateral agreements and other exclusive practices to which the various countries are parties. First on the list is Argentina, with which the United States has a conditional most-favored-nation agreement. That country is listed with having entered into nine bilateral pacts, dealing with exchange quotas, tariffs and clearing.

Belgium, with which this country has consummated a reciprocal trade agreement and thus has an unconditional commitment, is listed as having made 20 bilateral agreements, dealing with exchange, surtax, quota, tariffs, clearing and compensation. In addition the compilation notes that since 1931 Belgium has employed a quota license system for certain imports and that the women's clothing quota is based on a period when the United States was not a supplier and that the United States is further discriminated against in the levying specific graduated tariffs on automobiles on the basis of weight, with the lighter British, German and Italian cars paying lower rates.

Likewise it is pointed out that Brazil, another country with which a reciprocal pact has been negotiated, although it has not yet been ratified, has nine bilateral agreements with other nations giving them special treatment in the matter of exchange and quotas. Since 1931, the statement reported, "imports into Brazil have been subject to stringent exchange control."

Disadvantages Cited.

These are samples of the findings presented in the compilation. The British Empire tariff preference subjects American goods sent to the British dominions to a duty 15 to 20 per cent higher than that on empire products. Austria controls imports by quotas, making special agreements with countries that purchase there. Canada "has extended the rates of its intermediate tariff schedule to nearly al non-British countries except the United States," the report pointed out, and uses "arbitrary valuations and anti-dumping duties" to curtail imports "in particular from the United States."

In Denmark, it is contended, "an exchange control board controls the issue of exchange certificates to the disadvantage of American imports" while the "tariff on automobiles is based on cylinder capacity and is therefore higher on cars of the United States than on those of Great Britain," in addition to granting special concessions to 13 nations other than the United States in bilateral agreements.

France has made 52 bilateral agreements governing its trade with other nations and "does not extend all of its conventional tariff reductions to the United States," the report asserts. The French also use their quota system for bargaining purposes, the size of the quota depending partly on certain compensation for French exports, it is contended.

Germany has 25 import control boards which regulate exports and imports by quotas, import licenses, barter transactions, exchange control and other devices, in addition to 57 bilateral agreements, the report revealed. Similar barriers to an unobstructed flow of trade throughout the worl are revealed as the list goes through country after country.

Champ Beer Guzzler Recovers in Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 23.—The laurel wreath of fame weighed heavily upon the brow—or perhaps the stomach—of Emil Cella tonight.

Last night, Cella, a Baltimore resident, claimed the world's beer-guzzling title when he downed a half-gallon in 27.6 seconds.

Tonight, Cella was in the Johns Hopkins Hospital with:

A ruptured blood vessel in his stomach.

The eating of the crabs came as part of Cella's training program for the beer-drinking contest.

He is not seriously ill, physicians said, but must remain in the hospital for at least a week. On a liquid diet—milk!

Epidemic Fear Is Discounted By Dr. Ruhland

Three Cases of Paralysis Reported in Capital Since Saturday.

Fear of an epidemic of infantile paralysis sweeping the District was discounted yesterday by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

One new case was reported yesterday. This brought to three the number reported in the District since Saturday.

The spread of the disease through Virginia almost to the borders of the city has caused some uneasiness among health officials here. They deny there is anything to be alarmed about but admit possibilities the disease may spread, because of the differing health checks and regulations of the States and counties close to the District.

The first instruction of District Health Department officials is to call a physician to study the illness of any person who may fall ill.

Since January 1 12 cases of the disease have been reported in the District. In 1933 14 cases were reported and in 1934, 13 cases.

Philippines Ready For U. S. Trade Pact

By the Associated Press.

Francisco A. Delgado, Philippine resident commissioner here, said yesterday the Philippine Islands would be glad to sign a tariff treaty with the United States, but could not accept the same terms given Cuba.

Authoritative circles have been discussing a possibility that the United States may place the islands in the same preferred category as Cuba. This would be a move to meet problems raised by approaching independence for the Filipinos.

Three American tariff experts already have been appointed to meet a Filipino delegation at Manila in September to pave the way for a trade pact.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

The national re-employment office, located in the city hall, is to be moved to Fredericksburg, August 1, and the local office will be taken over by the Virginia FERA, with J. William May, former president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, in charge. Bernard H. Cook, local manager since 1933, will be in charge of the district office in Fredericksburg, with jurisdiction over several counties. Accompanying him will be Miss Audrey Lee Beach, statistical expert, and Joseph E. Schwarzman, assistant manager.

Mr. Cook states that since the establishment of the local office, in September, 1933, employment has been obtained for approximately 2,500 persons, and there are now approximately 600 names on the rolls of the office.

Mr. May will have as one of his assistants Henry E. Harris, senior contact man, and several others are to be selected. He was for many years engaged in the farm implement business, with his father, the late William H. May.

Checks covering tw oweeks' wgaes will be paid the women and girls on strike at the plant of the Century Manufacturing Co. this morning, according to announcement made yesterday. It is stated that when the girls left the plant Monday on strike, they did not return for their checks.

Charles Henry Smith, attorney for the plant, said yesterday that Sydney Weinman, of Batlimore, manager of the local plant, plans to hold a conference with the representatives of the strikers later this week or next week. Weinman has been absent from the city.

Mayor E. C. Davison was on the scene yesterday and posed with the strikers for sound pictures.

Church Belfry Restored To Its Original Style

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 23.—The belfry of old St. Ignatius Church at Beachville has been restored to its original style by the Rev. Clarence Malmeinster, S. J. The church was built in 1785, and it was found in repairing the belfry that the original oak beams used in the construction were in perfect condition. Fire threatened the church building last year, but was extinguished by the parishioners.

In the cemetery surrounding the ancient structure are the graves of a number of priests who have served there. A church festival will be held by the congregation August 4.

Rule Banning Police Drinking Off Duty in County Rescinded

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County police aren't going to be sissies when they are off duty, after all. Following a conference yesterday between the sergeants of the county police force and the Montgomery County commissioners at Rockville, the rule against drinking off duty was repealed.

The sergeants told the commissioners that neither they nor the members of the force wish to feel that they have to be sneaks when off duty nor that they do not have the same rights to relaxation as other county workers.

The commissioners amended the recent stringent rule that provided county policemen could not drink either on or off duty to read that they must not drink while in uniform or on duty. They are permitted to drink while off duty and not not in uniform so long as they do not become intoxicated and disorderly.

The entire police force, except one officer, refused to sign the order pledging them not to drink at any time and the sergeants were called before the commissioners to explain. Apparently both sides were satisfied after the conference and the change in the order.

Pension System Explained.

Miss Lavinia Engle, member of both of the county welfare boards, appeared before the commissioners to explain the setup of the old-age pension system, which is expected to begin functioning shortly.

Miss Engle also explained that the county branch of the State welfare board must handle the juvenile court work and other child welfare activities in order that Federal and State money can be appropriated.

Robert E. Bondy and Judge Thomas C. Kelley, members of the county welfare board, conferred with the commissioners later in the day.

Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale was appointed member of the board in charge of the reemployment service. The position does not pay any additional salary.

The application of the Security Land Co. for rezoning of a plot of ground on Edgemoor lane near Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, to permit the erection of a two-story apartment house, was granted.

The salary of Marbury Gates, clerk in the commissioner's office, was raised from $100 to $125 a month.

Rudolph Neal, of Brookmont, Md., was arrested yesterday by County Policeman E. L. Thompson on charges of taking bets on horse racing. According to police, he had betting slips on him and later wrote a confession that he had been accepting bets for several months.

He was released in $500 bond for his appearance in county police court at Rockville July 26.

This is the first in a series of classes to be held in preparation for the State judging contest at Timonium State Fair in September.

Prince Georges Votes Bus Line For Students

$1,800 to Be Set Aside for Route From Lanham to Bladensburg.

An appropriation of $1,800 will be made by the Prince Georges County commissioners for the establishment of a school bus line from Lanham (Md.) vicinity to Bladensburg, it was decided yesterday.

The long-fought-for line was obtained after a delegation from the Parent-Teacher Federation, including Nicholas Orem, county school superintendent, described the proposition as an "emergency need."

The original recommendation to the commissioners, made by Mr. Orem, included the Lanham-Bladensburg line and three lines in the southern part of the county, for colored children. The total cost would be $5,000. The southern bus lines would bring the colored children to schools at Upper Marlboro.

Commissioner Vinton D. Cockey presented the motion, which was amended by Commissioner James A. Berry to include only the Lanham-Bladensburg line. Perry Boswell, president of the commissioners' board, opposed the measure because of the scarcity of funds.

The new line, which will transport children to the Bladensburg Junior High and elementary schools, will begin at Ardmore, Md., and pass through Lanham, Seabrook and all intervening points. It will be approximately 20 miles long. After the first year it is expected to be maintained at a cost of only $1,200 a year.

The commissioners, holding their weekly meeting at Upper Marlboro, also took under advisement a request for the construction of Sligo Parkway No. 1A, in Takoma Park.

A letter from the executive committee of the Community League of Takoma Park declared that body was urging the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and the State Roads Commission to complete the project as soon as possible.

The commissioners also approved the rezoning of two plots from residential to industrial. One consisted of plots 40 through 44 of block 25 of College Park, requested by G. T. Wells & Sons. The other was the farm property of S. B. Hoile on the Marlboro pike near the Walker Mill road.

The State Roads Commission was asked to improve Valley street in Maryland Park. The request was made by citizens of that community.

2 Hurt in Accident On Baltimore Road

John H. Dietrich, 60, of Buffalo, N. Y., and his daughter, Miss Margie Dietrich, 32, were injured yesterday in an automobile accident on the Baltimore boulevard at Riverdale, Md.

Brought to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, Dietrich was said to have a possible fractured skull, fractured leg and ribs. Miss Dietrich suffered fractured ribs. Members of the rescue squad said the automobile in which the two were riding crashed into a truck at the traffic signal. No one in the truck was injured.

Fund Handling Is Simplified In Mt. Rainier

Accounting System and Unified Banking Plan Authorized.

The Mayor and Town Council of Mount Rainier at a special meeting Monday night authorized a complete change in the accounting and banking systems now used by the town clerk.

Under the new setup, which was recommended by R. P. Bowman and Rexford Worley, auditors, all of the several bank accounts now used by the town will be combined into one, while a fund accounting system will be set up on the town books for the first time in the history of the community.

In their report the auditors said the revised form of cash journal recommended by them would simplify the work of the clerk-treasurer and make available immediately valuable and vital information for the guidance of the town officials.

No additional expense would be involved by the change in the accounting system.

The new system will be put into effect at once, while a new audit of the town books from May 10 down to the present time was authorized so that there would be no delay or unnecessary work for the auditors next year.

Funds of the police court, which have previously been handled by the clerk-treasurer apart from the regular town funds, also will be included in the change, as the auditors recommended that they be recorded in the cash journal under a separate heading.

The new accounting system and the combining of the bank accounts will not affect the status of the road and sidewalk bond fund and auditors recommended "It is, of course, understood that should the town sell additional bonds a separate bank account and record would be necessary to meet the requirements of the road and sidewalk bond act."

Blood Found on Rock; Murder Suspected

The discovery of a quantity of congealed blood on a rock at Little Falls Branch near the District line yesterday led Montgomery County police to search the underbrush on the theory of a murder in the vicinity.

Sergt. Earl H. Burdine, who conducted the search, said a camper nearby had noticed the blood on a large boulder about 150 yards from Massachusetts avenue. A gory trail led to the avenue, he revealed, along a narrow dirt road. Dr. E. A. A. Dunn, of Bethesda, examined samples of the blood and said that about 2 quarts had been spilled. He has not determined if it is human.

Rosslyn Firm Marks 45-Week Safety Period

Gas Company Celebrates With Breakfast for Its Employes.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

At a breakfast yesterday morning at the Washington Golf and Country Club the Rosslyn Gas Co. celebrated 45 weeks without an accident in any branch of its business, and 347,000 miles of safe driving by its employes.

B. M. Smith, chairman of the Arlington County Board, County Manager Roy S. Braden, E. G. Baldwin, vice president of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, and H. L. Leonard, gas company safety engineer, complimented the organization on its record and expressed hope that safe driving throughout the county would be promoted by the business organizations through similar system of yearly records.

Sheriff Howard B. Fields, on behalf of the company, awarded medals for safe driving to 12 employes with records ranging from 4,000 to 70,000 miles.

Those receiving medals and mileage driven without an accident are: R. C. Brehaut, 63,000 miles; E. C. Crouch, 70,000 miles; J. Albrecht, 54,500 miles; A. M. Richardson, 54,000 miles; Walter Colburn, 48,000 miles; Elvin W. Sill, 48,000 miles; C. M. Fletcher, 26,400 miles; Benjamin Tayman, 10,000 miles; G. A. Tribby, 8,043 miles; J. Fred Abel, 6,480 miles; E. G. Baldwin, 12,150 miles; W. K. MacMahon, 4,000 miles, and Howard Williams, 10,000 miles.

R. C. Brehaut, manager of the company, presided.

Endeavoring to raise funds to begin construction of a hospital in Arlington County, the woman's auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association meeting yesterday at the Lyon Park Community House completed its plans for a festival July 31 at the community house.

A program of games and other amusements have been planned. The festivities will open with an old-fashioned cold-plate dinner, with home-made cake and ice cream.

The nurses of the county are cooperating with the auxiliary and will conduct a first-aid tent on the grounds.

Chairmen of the various activities named by Mrs. Joseph Haley, general chairman, are: Mrs. Joseph Boss, vice chairman; Mrs. Arthur Orr, games; Mrs. Harley G. Gibson, ice cream and cake; Mrs. W. D. Martin, music and dancing; Mrs. Carlton K. Lewis, candies; Mrs. Heys, soft drinks; Mrs. A. Burton Colman, grab bags and fortune telling; Mrs. Walter K. Handy and Mrs. Lewis C. Carl, supper; Mrs. Presley Griffin, lights, and Mrs. Bessie Butterfield, first-aid. Miss Helen Samuels will act as treasurer for the festival.

Since work is progressing rapidly with the grading of county roads along which sewers have not been installed, the county board will be asked to advertise for bids for resurfacing of these roads at its meeting of July 30, it was learned from the office of county manager last night.

Approximately 30 miles of county roads will be resurfaced.

The Arlington Rotary Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club. All members are asked to attend.

Longer Course Set for School At Bladensburg

Prince Georges Federation Reports Junior High Will Add Third Year.

Reports that a third year of study will be added to the curriculum at Bladensburg (Md.) Junior High School this fall were received at the recent meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations of Prince Georges County held at the Bladensburg firehouse.

Judge Alfred D. Bailey and Harry A. Mercer, members of a special committee appointed to investigate the status of the institution, reported that the county board of education was favorably inclined to the addition of the extra year of study.

The recent session of the Maryland Legislature authorized a bond issue to cover the expense of an addition to the school, with the view that the institution soon would be made into a senior high school.

Highway Patrol.

Efforts will be made, it was decided, to alleviate crowded traffic conditions on the Defense highway in the vicinity of Bladensburg. The secretary was instructed to ask State police officials to have one officer stationed at the Memorial Cross at the intersection of the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and the Defense highway to direct traffic, and two more assigned to patrol the highway.

The federation indorsed the automobile safety campaign being conducted by the District of Columbia, and voted to urge the Maryland officials to carry on a similar drive throughout the State.

Progress in the movement to combine the activities of the Prince Georges County group with citizens' associations of Washintgon in an inter-federation conference was reported by Bert H. Wise, member of the special committee appointed to investigate the matter.

Lower Gas Rates.

Efforts to obtain lower gas rates in the Seabrook neighborhood are meeting with the co-operation of the utilities company, it was announced by Burdette Richter. Mr. Richter was asked to follow up the matter and report at the next meeting of the federation.

The secretary was instructed to write E. G. Duncan, district engineer of the Maryland State roads commission, with regard to having a warning sign erected at the curve on River road near Evergreen Cemetery, and speed limit signs at the town limits of Bladensburg.

Reports that North Wells avenue east of Edmonston was impassable were made by the Edmonston Road Citizens Association and the federation was asked to assist in efforts to have the thoroughfare improved. The matter also will be taken up with Mr. Duncan, of the State roads commission.

The need of through bus service to downtown Washington from nearby communities in the county again was emphasized and the secretary was asked to take up the matter with the Capital Transit Co. It was pointed out that street car service on the Kenilworth line soon will be replaced with bus service. Residents of Kenilworth, Tuxedo, River road, Cheverly, the Defense highway and Bladensburg would be benefited by through service, it was stated.

Crown Favored To Head Firemen

Beattie Unlikely to Enter Prince Georges Race.

With little likelihood that W. R. Beattie, of Bladensburg, will enter the race for presidency of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association, Theodore Crown, of Seat Pleasant, Md., was yesterday declared leading candidate.

Crown, a Washington newspaper man, will be opposed by at least three other candidates when elections are held at the Riverdale convention Saturday, August 10.

Those expected to oppose him are William S. Newman, of Mount Rainier; F. B. Heimer, of Branchville, and a candidate to be placed in the running by the Cottage City department. There has also been rumored the possibility of three other candidates entering the race within the next few days.

T. W. Venemann, of Riverdale, will undoubtedly be unopposed for re-election as secretary of the association. He is also head of the fire college, held each year by the State association at the University of Maryland.

Study Tin Beer Containers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 23.—Employes of the N. & G. Taylor Tinplate Mill have been experimenting recently on the manufacture of tin containers for beer, stating that with the metal receptacles the beer can be more easily chilled for drinking purposes, and can also be handled and stowed away with less danger of breaking.

Truck Hits Bridge, 1 Dead, 2 Injured

Deerfield Man Killed in Crash Near Staunton.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 23.—One man was killed and two persons hurt when a truck crashed into a concrete bridge railing on the Jefferson highway, 15 miles west of Staunton, late today. State and county officers believe the driver dozed at the wheel.

Bernard Riley, about 40, of Deerfield, died as he was being brought to a hospital here. His head was crushed. Thomas R. Harper, of Goshen, about 38, believed to have been the driver, and Robert Staples, 15, are in a hospital, but their chances for recovery are good. The boy is a son of W. F. Staples, of Goshen, employer of Harper and Riley.

The truck was loaded lengthwise with cord-wood. In the collision, the radiator and engine were driven back under the bed, while the logs, swept forward by the impact, carried away the cab.

Virginia WPA District Office Is Announced

Fredericksburg Selected for Headquarters of Sixth Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 23.—Selection of Fredericksburg for the Sixth District office of the new Works Progress Administration in Virginia was authoritatively learned today. The district includes 18 counties and besides Fredericksburg the cities of Alexandria and Charlottesville. About 60 persons will be employed.

Fredericksburg was chosen because of its central location after Charlottesville had been named previously as the site of the headquarters.

The district office will act in a supervisory capacity over the four areas in its confines—Charlottesville, Fredericksburg, Henrico and Manassas—and will be responsible for administration in the counties until they are transferred to the WPA.

Other district offices will be at Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Bristol and Staunton.

Man Thrown by Horse Is Injured Fatally

Cumberland, Md., July 23 (AP).—William W. McDonald, 21, was fatally injured today when a horse, which had never been successfully ridden, threw him.

McDonald, his skull fractured, was found unconscious in the pasture where the horse was kept. He was brought to the hospital here but died before being admitted. McDonald was a resident of Little Orleans, Allegany County.

Warning Sent Fairfax Folk Upon Paralysis

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Dr. A. L. Carson, jr., director of public health in Fairfax County, Va., yesterday issued a letter urging citizens to avoid crowds and to stay in good physical condition in an effort to prevent spread of infantile paralysis.

He also addressed an open letter to ministers of churches of the county asking all Sunday schools and other gatherings for children be suspended for at least the next three weeks. At Herndon, Va., where there is a case of paralysis, children under 16 have been prohibited from attending the theater.

Dr. Carson stated: "Anyone showing such symptoms as sudden rise in temperature, nausea and vomiting, irritability, restlessness, drowsiness, headache, pain in neck, back or extremities with muscle-twitching, or in fact any unusual symptoms, should be kept completely at rest in bed, isolated for the protection of others and a physician called at once. It is very important that suspected cases be seen early by the physician, for the outcome of a case is largely determined by the medical care received early in the disease.

State Millers to Map Freight Rate Fight

Richmond, Va., July 23 (AP).—State millers will meet at Old Point Comfort Thursday to map a fight for competitive freight rates on grain products from Virginia to the Carolinas, which is to be made with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

H. E. Kelner, commerce counsel of the State corporation commission, will attend the conference, which will coincide with the meeting of the Southern Freight Association.

Scenes of Dixie Heroes' Exploits to Be Marked

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 23.—The West Virginia Highway Marker Commission will designate places where heroes of the Confederacy once lived and scenes of their exploits in this State.

The former home of Capt. John McNeill, in Hardy County, in the South Branch Valley will be among the places. His capture of Cumberland, Md., stands out as one of the daring feats of the Civil War.

McNeill organized a company of independents which under the name of McNeill's Rangers, became famous for raids on the Union forces.

Karpis Hunted With 2 Others In Middlewest

Enemy No. 1 Linked With Gun Battle, Kidnaping in Nebraska.

By the Associated Press.

Blue Rapids, Kans., July 23.—Manhunters of four States joined tonight in a search for three asserted killers—one believed by some pursuers to be slippery Alvin Karpis, current Public Enemy No. 1.

The trio fought a gun battle with police at Fairbury, Nebr., and abducted a man later released unharmed near here in their wild flight today.

Leaving a trail of stolen motor cars over Kansas and Nebraska, they were believed headed for Kansas City, Mo., or the hills of Oklahoma.

Tied Victim in Church.

In need of a car after the Fairbury gun fight, the three entered that of W. E. Grogman, Kansas City salesman, at Herkimer, Kans., forcing him to accompany them. They gave him a two-hour ride, then tied him to a chair in a church near here. They left with his automobile and most of his belongings.

All were armed with revolvers and also had at least three machine guns, Grogman said. They boasted of being "tough guys." Grogman said they refrained from calling each other by name.

At Fairbury the three were forced to leave their automobile after the engagement with Police Chief Joe Cook and Officer Foster Helvey, who fired when they refused to halt. The car had been stolen at Hooper, Nebr., by three men who abandoned one stolen in Michigan. Officers said the Michigan car was believed taken by slayers of two men near Saginaw on July 6.

Linked to Sheriff's Kidnaper.

Helvey said he believed the same trio engineered the abduction last week of Sheriff Emil Ackman at Fairbury, who expressed the opinion one was Karpis. He was released after undergoing questioning concerning Jess Doyle, now awaiting trial for a $150,000 bank robbery at Fairbury.

Goodman said he suspected nothing as he emerged from the elevator at Herkimer and saw them near his car today. One asked for a ride and then pointed a gun at him. Two entered and waited for the third to pick up three hidden machine guns. Then they sped away with their captive.

"They said they would leave my automobile in Kansas City," Goodman said.

Taxi Men Defy P.U.C. on Order To Slash Rates

public hearings," Elgen told Hohensee.

"No other witnesses were brought forward to make a case against the testimony of the majority of the witnesses, who, as you know, were drivers.

"Perhaps you are losing sight of the extra passenger charges allowed in the order. Did you notice you can make charges for extra luggage?"

Hohensee replied to Elgen at length. Later the union leader told newspapermen it would be "impossible" for the drivers to comply with the commission order.

"The country has come to a mighty sad pass," he said, "when people who want to ride in cabs are told to pay fares which will only let the drivers earn $2.50 for a 12-hour day."

Meanwhile, commission members pointed out their order made no change in the existing zone limits and suggested a trial would show the extra charges for luggage would increase materially the pay of the drivers.

The cab operators remained at odds with each other. Advocates of the commission-sponsored rates insisted the lower fare would mean greater income for the operators because of increased business.

Union drivers countered if all operators were required to charge higher fares, everyone would make more money and there would be no substantial decrease in the number of passengers.

Indications were the commission was influenced in reaching its decision by testimony of drivers during the hearings that they did not keep accurate records of where passengers were accepted and where they were delivered, as required by earlier commission orders.

It was obvious that many of the drivers, purchasing their cabs on the installment plan or in effect renting the vehicles, did not wish the actual owners to know exactly what their revenue amounted to each day.

Drivers complained the more fares they reported the more they were required to pay the cab owners. In the end, they complained, they had little left for their living expenses.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, has begun drafting a bill intended to outlaw so-called "Shylock" cab sellers. Such legislation, he frequently has said, would end much of the difficulties of the drivers and give the operators remaining on the streets additional business.

Revolt Flares, Mexico Moves On Dictators

new military commander is loyal to Cardenas.

Observers predicted Garrido would flee to escape assassination. His red shirt organization was expected to disband. During his long rule he expelled the church from Tabasco. He initiated ceremonies at which images of the saints were burned. Religious emblems were seized from private homes.

After dealing with the Tabasco situation Cardenas and federal officials waded into the trouble in Tamaulipas—distantly separated from Tabasco—where state authorities are in conflict with the agrarian population.

Villareal has not yet resigned, but thousands of armed, angry peasants are bivouaced around his heavily-armed palace at Ciudd Victori.

Officils hinted tht unless he resigns within 24 hours he will be removed by the president.

Brownsville, Tex., July 23 (AP).—Matamoros, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from here, was in a state of virtual siege late today with some 2,000 peasants, variously armed, outside the town awaiting an answer to their demand for removal of the city administration.

A delegation from the insurgents, who also opposed the officials of the State of Tamaulipas, in which the city is located, called late in the day on Gabriel Cervera, commander of the local garrison, asking what position Federal troops would take.

The general took their inquiry under advisement without setting a definite time for his answer.

Fall Held Imminent.

With reports from Mexico City indicating overthrow of the state administration with headquarters at Victoria, observers here believed the fall of the Matamoros officials would be only a matter of hours. City and state officials were closely allied.

The peasants remained outside the city limits, and made no effort to enter, but the entire police force, heavily armed, was on duty at strategic points around the plaza.

Reports were that Portes Gil, former governor of Tamaulipas and former President of Mexico, was back of the movement.

Significantly, the Brownsville dispatches quoted reports that Emilio Portes Gil, former president of Mexico, was backing the peasant rebellion.

It was recalled that Portes Gil was one of the closest friends and most loyal supporter of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, iron man of Mexican politics, who recently came into sharp conflict with Tresident Lazaro Cardenas over the latter's labor policy.

The quarrel with Cardenas presumably settled, Calles ostensibly "retired" to his home state of Senora, far from the Mexican capital. Twice before, however, he had "retired," only to emerge again to make his hand felt in the working of Mexican politics.

efforts to force the league to face the Italo-Ethiopian conflict squarely.

Sir George Clerk conferred with Laval this morning as negotiations to settle the East African crisis were speeded. They agreed to urge Litvinoff to summon the council before the end of this month. Already Avenol has warned council members to hold themselves in readiness for a call to Geneva.

The British envoy argued against using the league to localize the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. He stressed the necessity of using every available resource to maintain peace in order to uphold prestige of the covenant.

Selassie Resents 'Snub' By Vinci on Birthday

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, July 23.—Emperor Haile Selassie celebrated his forty-fourth birthday today with members of the Italian legation absent, causing the Conquering Lion of Judah, King of Kings of Ethiopia and Elect of God, to consider himself "insulted."

Count Vinci-Gigliucci, Italian minister, stayed away from the imperial palace in personal protest against the emperor's speeches to parliament and his troops last week. His aids also ignored the celebration.

Ethiopian officials said they considered the position taken by the Italians a "provocative affront." But it was unlikely to alter the Ethiopian government's fixed policy regarding Italy's East Africa program.

Woman Seeks $300,000 In Triple Damages Suit

Claiming $300,000 under the triple damages provision of the anti-trust laws, Mrs. Eva Hale, 1248 G street northeast, yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed suit against the Terminal Ice & Fuel Co., Inc.; the Terminal Refrigerating & Warehousing Co., the American Ice Co., John Blick, and six others described as agents or employes of the four companies, on the ground they conspired to destroy a lucrative ice business she built up in 1931.

Mrs. Hale said she had built up a business amounting to $100,000 a year, when the defendants conspired to wreck her by obtaining the services of a trusted employe who followed her routes and undersold her. Because of the anti-trust law provisions, she asked triple damages for the alleged wrongs done her.

A Saner Divorce Law.

The bill to establish a more moderate and sensible divorce law in the District of Columbia awaits only the signature of the President. To the grounds on which a divorce may be obtained are now added desertion for two years, voluntary separation from bed and board for five consecutive years, and final conviction of a felony involving moral turpitude with sentence to a penal institution for not less than two years.

As Representaitve Carpenter pointed out, these modifications will tend in no way to turn the District into another Reno or Arkansas or Mexico. They will simply moderate a law that has driven people to Reno. Divorce mills, with their inevitable stigma, are a disgrace to any country. But the "appearance of evil," which must be carefully built up by a man or his wife in a community which has adultery as its only ground for divorce, is an extreme that should be just as studiously avoided.

The bill as passed is a compromise. Yet it conforms in many respects to Representative Carpenter's criterion of what divorce should mean in any jurisdiction. Mr. Carpenter told the House that proponents of the bill attempted to "make it just as stringent as possible and still give relief." That is indeed the only sane and civilized way to view the divorce problem.

Anne Douglas Sedgwick.

The author of "The Little French Girl" is dead in England at the age of 62. Anne Douglas Sedgwick, in private life Mrs. Basil De Selincourt, was also the author of many other books, but it is for her story of the little French girl who was transplanted to England that she will perhaps be longest remembered. The book was in no way autobiographical, but its deep sincerity was grounded in experience since the author herself had known what it was to be born under one flag and live under another. At the age of nine, she accompanied her parents from their home in New Jersey to England and thereafter divided her time between that country and France.

Miss Sedgwick's writing possessed always a certain quaintness as if she were only on formal terms with her characters. That attitude, however, did not detract from a sympathetic presentation of them. She was in no way a modernist and, in fact, her gentle obsession for viewing facts in the light of a past era gave them, as one reviewer said, an "historical importance."

Though Miss Sedgwick often declared that she turned to writing by accident, it was soon evident that her talent in that direction had acted as a magnet which would not be denied. For in 37 years she turned out 20 novels of excellent workmanship and in 1931 she was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Miss Sedgwick once remarked that "Life is all that one can ask of a novel." It must have been gratifying to her to realize that her works embodied this living quality and that, in the sensitive precision of her writings, she handed down a quality that will not soon burn out.

Ideal News Story?

Practically every dictionary gives a different definition of "news." The Little Oxford Dictionary says simply that it is "fresh events reported." Stanley Walker, in his book on the subject, reservedly states that "probably there can be no exact definition of news." At the risk of being thought provincial, we confess to a liking for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Mahnkey's explanation of the term. Mrs. Mahnkey is the Missouri grandmother who has been picked as the best country newspaper correspondent in the United States and is now on her first visit to New York City.

Outlining her method of selecting the tidbits which she has been sending to the Forsyth Republican for the past 44 years, Mrs. Mahnkey said she reasons it out as follows: "If any stranger came in, or anybody moved or a baby was born or somebody got married or died, then that was news. If something I could write would brighten up the columns or make someone laugh or please some little child or some old, old person, I'd try to do that." She admits that she does not report the crime and scandal in her home town because "those sort of things happen in any place." Naturally, war, also, is out of her ken.

It goes without saying that it would be difficult for a city newspaper, run on a large scale, to adhere to such a program of simplicity or to record, like a sun-dial, only the "sunny hours." Yet amusing human events are recounted in the largest metropolitan dailies. In a column alongside the story of Mrs. Mahnkey, in one of New York's foremost papers, is an item that should give this country writer a certain amount of satisfaction. In many ways it seems to fit her idea of what constitutes news. In it is set forth the happy and optimistic decision of a Kansas City doctor to take 25 of his in-laws with him on a vacation and give them the "time of their lives."

There is one angle, however, which might prevent this item from being considered an ideal news story to Mrs. Mahnkey's way of thinking. The end of this unique vacation is not yet in sight. It is a little too early to say whether or not the doctor's noble experiment will eventually come under the head of "war."

Preparing For War.

Great Britain's decision to abandon naval ratios does not substantially change the gloomy outlook for disarmament. Japan had already denounced the ratio method of limiting navies, and France and Italy long ago manifested their dissatisfaction with it. The British government has merely recognized the hopelessness of trying to negotiate a new naval agreement on this basis.

It is not, therefore, the announcement by Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell that is significant, but the extensive preparations for war that have frustrated every effort for the reduction of armaments. The will to disarm has become pitifully weak. Existing restrictions are being gradually swept away and no international agreement to take their place is in sight. Whatever shock may be involved in the news from London arises only from Britain's frank recognition of existing conditions.

It may be argued, of course, that the British should have clung to the ratio principle until some other means of limiting naval craft could have been worked out. If a naval conference had been scheduled for the near future, that course doubtless would have been followed as a means of securing concessions for surrender of the ratio principle. But the first lord of admiralty does not anticipate a naval conference until 1942. In the meantime Britain evidently wishes to keep naval discussion alive by shifting emphasis from ratios to programs.

In other words, the British are trying to be conciliatory. The fact that a naval ratio between Great Britain and Germany was established only a few weeks ago indicates that Downing street has no antipathy for this type of agreement. But the British will not try to force it upon nations to which it is distasteful.

The apparent logic of the British attitude should not, however, distract attention from the deeper implications of the consecutive steps by which naval limitations are being abolished. First, the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 was denounced by Japan. Now, largely because of that country's adamant position, the principle on which that agreement was based is recognized as a dead letter. When the next attempt to bring about naval disarmament is made the world will have to begin all over again. Moreover, the present tendency is to augment the machinery of war, and some countries are disposed to regard treaties as scraps of paper. It would be naive indeed to ignore the dangers of the course the world is taking.

There is nothing sacred, of course, about the principle of naval ratios. Fair limitations secured by any other means would be just as effective. The only distressing thing about the abandonment of the ratio idea is that it leaves the whole disarmament problem in a muddle from which no escape is apparent. For the aversion to ratios is, in some respect, a dislike for limitation of any type.

The real cause for concern is the drift toward more naval construction as a means of offsetting the failure of disarmament negotiations. With dreadful consistency the world is preparing for war. If catastrophe is to be averted it will require more skill and determination than has been manifested in the struggle for disarmament.

The Cost Of Conquest.

Suspension of Italy's gold coverage law turns the spotlight of public interest upon the far-reaching economic ramifications of the proposed Ethiopian conquest. Indications are that some of the gold against which currency has been issued will now be used to buy war supplies abroad. Italy has discovered that war preparations are expensive, even before the fighting begins. These outlays and their effect upon Italy's finances, as well as the political developments in this dispute, must be given a prominent place in any comprehensive view of the impending crisis.

Italy's national debt has been steadily rising since 1931. The Fascist economic machine has been kept in relatively smooth working order by a program of borrowing and spending. In other words a deficiency of purchasing power has been supplied by the government at the expense of future taxpayers—or bondholders. Another considerable deficit was forecast for this year, even before preparations for the Ethiopian conquest began. It is estimated that the government has spent approximately $100,000,000 on this expedition to date.

Undoubtedly this adverse trend in Italy's finances was a factor in the decision to seek control over the East African state. Mussolini hopes to obtain in Ethiopia raw materials that are lacking in Italy. Perhaps he was also anxious to divert the attention of the Italian people from their economic difficulties by arousing hostility against a traditional foe. In his movement toward these objectives, however, he is incurring vast new expenses the extent of which can not yet be foreseen.

The risks which the Fascist regime is assuming are accentuated, moreover, by the nature of the country which it is seeking to penetrate. A survey by the Alexander Hamilton Institute has failed to reveal any vast sources of wealth that Italy may tap in East Africa. Ethiopia is believed to have considerable mineral wealth, but the country is undeveloped, its people live in poverty, producing barely enough food to support themselves. Where would Italy find the capital to develop such an "empire" if a costly war is required to subdue it? Even if such development could be anticipated under Italian domination it would be a long, slow process. In the meantime the financial problems of the government at Rome may be expected to become more acute.

When these economic risks are added to the political handicaps that would be involved in any war of aggression by the Fascist state, Italy's position becomes somewhat precarious. Unfortunately the true situation will probably be concealed from the people while the war spirit is being aroused. But regardless of whether the dispute is settled in council halls or on the battlefield, an economic accounting will ultimately have to be made. And the indications are that it will be painful.

A Welcome Purge.

Where many a single voice has gone unheeded, a chorus of complaints from the farmers of South Dakota has induced State and Federal officials to withhold relief from those who, though able, refuse to work. All relief, except that administered by counties for the benefit of absolute unemployables, has been suspended in South Dakota until the grain harvest has absorbed every needed man. Similar action has been taken in rural sections of six other Midwestern States where dole recipients have refused to work in the fields.

This action follows reports not alone from the Midwest but from all parts of the country that private employers offering work are met with laughter from loafers who blandly announce that they are "on relief." That these malingerers are soon to be dealt with throughout the country is indicated in the announcement of an imminent "purge" of all Federal relief rolls.

The "purge" will be part of an intensive drive undertaken by the Reemployment Service and WPA officials to place every possible man on a farm or industrial job. Within the last month, every person on relief has been classified as to regular occupation and training. As these men are assigned to work relief projects, their names will be stricken from relief rolls to be re-entered when employment ends and then only after "a very strict examination."

This is welcome news. Too long has relief been administered in a disorganized and utterly haphazard manner. With no basic philosophy other than the worthy desire to keep men from starving, public money has been ladled out by the billion. Now, at last, something approaching the efficient British "works test" is to be installed. If a man can work but will not when a job is made available to him, he can get out and shift for himself. The public owes him no sympathy or support.

In this connection there may be significance in the fact that England, which has long followed this system, today is reporting the greatest private employment and the least unemployment of recent years. On the other hand, the United States, though enjoying an appreciable gain in business and industrial fields, has until recent months faced the discouraging spectacle of mounting relief rolls.

An Admirable Appointment.

President Roosevelt was well advised in naming Harold M. Stephens to the District Court of Appeals. Though he will sit in the place of a man whose record was the envy of the legal profession and public alike, Mr. Stephens' background and training well qualify him as the successor to the late Justice Hitz.

With a notable record in the Far West, supported by extensive graduate training at the University of California and at Harvard, Mr. Stephens has his service as Assistant United States Attorney General and more recently as Assistant to the Attorney General to recommend him from the standpoint of legal capacity. His interest in the legal aspects of modern medicine and hospitalization further mark him as a jurist able to look beyond the narrow strictures of the law. In addition he has shown himself to be a man of unimpeachable character.

Whatever disappointment may be felt by citizens who hoped to see a member of the District Supreme Court advanced will be offset, in large measure, by the fitting choice made by the President from the Department of Justice.

People kick so much about the weather that it would serve them right if it were discontinued.

It is usually the case that a platform is something a candidate stands on when running, but falls down on after he's elected.

One Political Distinction.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

In these days of political confusion it is difficult to define Democrats or Republicans. There are many kinds of Democrats and many kinds of Republicans. In some respects Conservative Democrats are leaning toward Republicanism, while Progressive Republicans have gone New Deal and radical Democrats are accused of turning Socialistic. But there seems to be one clear distinction between the Republican Administration of Herbert Hoover and the Democratic Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt: Confronted by an economic emergency the Republicans didn't know when or how to start; the New Dealers, apparently, do not know when or how to stop.

'Close Military Road.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a property owner and taxpayer in Arlington County, Virginia, I have been much interested in your editorials and articles relative to the closing of the Airport road. This road is a great menace, and it should have been closed with the opening of the Arlington Memorial Bridge, over which passenger and bus traffic should have been routed. With all trucks using Columbia pike and the lower road to Alexandria or the Jefferson Davis highway, with the widening of Columbia pike and the widening of the Military road along the Arlington Cemetery wall from Columbia pike to the entrance of the Arlington Bridge, there will be no necessity of going to much expense by reason of closing the Airport road.

And this should be done at once, without any further ado. Arlington County did not build this road, and if certain factions over here, some of whom no doubt have an eye on the airport property as a future real estate venture, continue to be arbitrary about the matter, the United States authorities must act and act quickly. I have been in my car and on buses, as well, when landing airplanes narrowly missed colliding or striking the vehicle in which I was riding. It was not the fault of the pilot or the driver of the car, either. The action of the county authorities in this matter is most reprehensible and shows the lack of clear-headed thinking.

Nothing will be done about this unfortunate situation until the majority of the taxpayers take the stand to force these idle men and women to go home and stay there and let the county manager and the county board run the county affairs in a sane business-like manner, without unnecessary interference.

Let the Airport road be closed without delay and begin widening the roads mentioned above to care for the heavy traffic. Thus the situation will be quickly and easily solved without waiting to build additional roads, which are not necessary at the present time.

20 Cents A Vote?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is proposed that Congress pass appropriate laws to have the United States Treasury largely finance party campaigns in Presidential elections. The amount available for each party should be based on the vote cast in the previous Presidential election—say at a rate of 20 cents per vote, with a maximum of $3,000,000 for any one party. This set-up would keep the two major parties "even" and, at the present time, would come as a graceful gesture from the Democrats, inasmuch as the last election they cast some 47,000,000 more votes than the G. O. P.

Private donations for national campaign purposes should be limited to $5 each, and heavy penalties assessed for violation of this provision. The adoption of this idea would be a real step toward true democracy. No longer would it be necessary for great political parties, on bended knees, to solicit funds from rich and powerful individuals and corporations, or to cater unduly to these elements, either before or after election. And any altruistic campaign contributors, who give without expectation of reward, would be relieved of an unfair burden.

No Dutch Elm Funds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The zero hour for the American elm is at hand. Handicapped by delays, inadequate funds and restrictions which forbid the employment of trained scouts and tree climbers, the men in direct charge of the disease eradication work have struggled for the past month against almost insuperable obstacles. The $250,000 allotted in June will last but a few days longer, and yet the Allotment Board at Washington has done absolutely nothing to provide for the continuation of the work.

Where the blame lies we do not certainly know, but we do know that a situation exists which calls for the expression in no uncertain terms of an aroused public opinion. The National Conference on Dutch Elm Disease, having made every effort to secure allocation of work-relief funds through the Federal Allotment Board without success, turns to Congress for a straight appropriation, which will place the work on a recognized basis for the future. The time is very short. We propose immediately to put it up to the Senators and Representatives from the infected and threatened States to introduce the necessary legislation carrying the full appropriation recommended by the Department of Agriculture, namely, $2,500,000.

To succeed, we must have the active support of the interested public everywhere. The American people want their elms saved regardless of official red tape, and they should say so in unmistakable terms.

More Rationalization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

When discussing married women workers, we must first consider that this is an emotional question and that most of the proponents of discrimination represent crystalizations of an earlier period or plain old envy and jealousy. The arguments advanced are, while sometimes logical, always mere rationalizations.

From a large view, the progress of the world depends upon freedom of thought and action in social, political and economic fields, and that progress can only be thwarted or retarded by discriminations based upon sex, color or creed. The upward path has always been slowly and steadily away from such discriminations, and it is only the panic and hysteria of the depression that has thrown us back upon the discriminating devices of the past.

It is perfectly absurd to penalize woman's natural right to marriage and to say that the moment she marries she must cease all economic activity. If the world be as bad off as that, we are lost beyond any help that such discriminations might temporarily give.

A Permanent Fusion Government?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a great admirer and constant reader of The Post, I feel constrained to write you after reading the "Pro's and Con's of Fusion Government." Your editorial department certainly has been grossly imposed upon by information doubtless furnished by the discredited Democratic organization in Montgomery County—better known as the "Lee-Prescott machine."

That you may know that I am not partisan, I will say that I am a Democrat, having held the highest offices in the party in this State, and have been a taxpayer for 35 years, but in fairness I can not remain silent and allow the present "fusion administration," which is making desperate efforts to give the taxpayers a "square deal," be assailed by those who have refused to take their defeat gracefully or who have ulterior motives.

Instead of an increase in taxes being due to "ineptitude" of the newly elected fusion county commissioners, such increase in taxes is directly due to the financial condition of the county left by the repudiated and discredited Democratic organization board of county commissioners. Instead of increasing salaries, except where those increases were made necessary by the Democratic Legislature, of which State Senator Prescott was a member, the salaries have been reduced.

Senator Prescott fails to state the whole truth, that increased taxation in Montgomery County can be laid directly at his door, due to his activities at the recent Legislature, when, through his recommendation, $150,919.50 additional allowance for public schools was made this year over last. That, due to the Prescott bill, $19,270.34 additional taxes must be levied and added to the county expense for police service.

I am a strong supporter and believer of civil service, but civil service does not call for retaining in office organization appointees who have been perniciously active politically.

Senator Prescott lays stress upon the fact that the fusion commissioners have appointed Mr. Aud, a former sheriff, as county assessor—and who, I am glad to note, seems to be making good in his difficult task without the assistance of the Democratic organization which has placed every obstacle in his way.

No doubt the fact that Assessor Aud has gone about his job seriously and in a business-like manner, equalizing taxes, treating every taxpayer on the same footing, regardless of who it is, has thrown the Democratic organization into a panic, and given it some idea of what may follow.

It is quite evident to those who live here and know the true situation that the discredited Democratic organization under the leadership of Senator Prescott has realized by this time that County Assessor Aud intends to see that justice is done the taxpayers, regardless of the continual mudslinging going on in the tax-fed county newspapers and in due time will reach all the organization taxpayers and make them pay their just share of taxes.

The fact that a strongly intrenched 20-year-old machine was beaten without organization or money by the fusion organization at the last election rather speaks for itself, and as long as the Democrats of the county continue with the present leadership the county is quite likely to remain fusion indefinitely.

The Post Impressionist

Figures Never Lie.

Post Office, Wednesday.

YES, thank you, we are back again.

Yes, thank you, we did have a good time.

No, thank you, we are not "burning to get to work," and we are not "glad" to be once more at the familiar desk. The only things that are burning about us are the sun and the sunburn—"and do they burn?" And the only thing we are glad about is a letter on the desk, which, signed by Law N. S. Crooce, is almost long enough to make a column without the Post-Impressionist's artful aid.

Here it is. Mr. Crooce turns to our pre-vacational dispute over the date of Lycurgus, and says:

"This evident uncertainty as to the real period in which Lycurgus lived is a consequence of your crude school of thought. You hold that Lycurgus lived in the tenth century B. C. One of your correspondents believes the Spartan lawgiver flourished in the ninth century A. D. Let us submit this pretty problem to the occult wisdom of the East.

"For many years, I have been an ardent seeker of Truth. But our universities could not satisfy me. I could make no sense of the pons asinorum of Euclid. My answers to problems in quadratics proved that my instructor was invariably wrong.

"I left the university, but only then did I really begin my quest.

I sought knowledge by travel.

"My search finally took me into the far foothills of the Himalayas—and there, in a remote solitude, I encountered the pundit Swami Rasdal Moahar Chutnee. When I discovered him, he was seated on a rock, contemplating his navel and repeating the sacred word 'Om.'

"The wise men of those climes do not follow our materialistic method of studying the words and beliefs of men as printed in books. But how useful Swami knowledge is you—and Lycurgus—will presently understand.

"My pundit showed me, for instance, that Einstein and other Western scientists are mistaken in assuming that the universe is curved. Actually it is in the form of a tetrahedral polygon embracing all space. It rests upon a column of basalt which is not unlike the Post-Impressionist Column: infinitely high, and based on the absolute.

"Swami Rasdal Moahar Chutnee also proved to me—and here is where we are coming to your case—that time does not exist. Never mind how. He did prove it.

"Hence it is evident that time prior to the Christian Era is negative and should be expressed by a minus-sign. Therefore, if Lycurgus was born, say, in the year 1050 B. C., the time since his birth is represented by the equation 1935+(—135), or 1935—1035 equals 885.

There you are, you see!

That's what happens to us for not knowing mathematics properly. That is the kind of error into which your Post-Impressionist is constantly tumbling because of his arithmetical blindness.

We admit it. Certainly you can't add a minus quantity to a plus quantity. When the two collide all you can do is to subtract the lesser from the greater. And 1050 subtracted from 1935 does leave 885 integers—or did when we went sluggishly to school. Also, as those 885 are the remainder of a plus figure, they must themselves be 885 little plusses—every last one of them.

We were wrong about Lycurgus, and that critic was right who censured us for saying the old fellow lived in the tenth century B. C. Figures never lie.

It is humbling—but it opens splendid vistas:

You may meet a megatherium Americanum strolling through the Capital any day.

The Punic Wars are still far ahead.

Thank Heaven, the radio that rasps through the restaurant is as yet a delusion, the girl who says "Oke" is a mere threat of the far future.

For, if the deluge occurred long enough ago, we are all of us now living in an antediluvian era.

We hurry to the end of our critic's letter:

"My efforts to enlighten my crass Far Western fellowmen have not," this philosopher concludes, "been thoroughly successful. My friends have therefore induced me to retire to a retreat in the thither side of the Anacostia and have there (I should say 'here') provided me with a room, the walls of which are heavily upholstered to exclude every sound from the outer world.

"There is only one objection to the retreat. It is personified by a fellow sojourner who insists that he is Aristotle.

"This is very annoying to me, because I am Aristotle."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Dark Virtue.

MOSE SOUTHWICK was a tall, burly darky who plodded out of Louisiana because a gravel pit shut down, and who went over into Mississippi to see if he couldn't get work near his cotton-farming brother. He might have known better. Because times, over there in the flat alluvial river land, were very bad. You could grow the cotton all right, but there was no telling if the white landowners could sell it and give you food for the winter or more than $5 for a year's work.

But Mose got a job. Even if it was on the decayed old Rutherford place, where Negroes were treated with just about as much neglect as you could discover anywhere in the State, he was given a ramshackle cabin to live in and a section of cotton land to plow and keep free from weeds.

And because Mose was what we can most easily call a "character," he loved it. Serious, mild, friendly, utterly self-respecting, given to preaching to his fellows on Sunday with a true and native eloquence, filled with a love of the land and with that sense of inner completeness which prophets and philosophers have tried to seize upon for some thousands of years now, Mose would seem to have made the adequate answer to his status and to have set himself, all things considered, in the road of a happy human being.

Then came woman-trouble. Then came trouble with the tyrannical, petty, and degenerate white overseer of the place. And then, false but almost hopeless to defend, came the trumped-up charge of having murdered one of his black neighbors.

* * * * *

I'VE run on a bit with the initial situation of Robert Rylee's novel —"Deep Dark River" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50)—because I want you to sense how different in stature and tenor it is from most novels about Negro life in the South. We have had fine ones before, notably from Dubose Heyward and Julia Peterkin, but if I may generalize somewhat roughly, even the best of them have for the most part dwelt upon the Negro as a carefree, and especially as a picturesque figure, with rather too few of the problems which may be taken as universals. Mr. Rylee can do sufficient justice to that side of the picture—so to speak, the "Ah's-feelin'-mighty-pohly-but-praise-de-Lawd-ah-kin-still-whang-a-banjo" school—but thank heaven he has something more to say.

Or rather, he finds something more to see. When you recollect what William Faulkner chooses to make out of Mississippi, or what Erskine Caldwell reports of a culture not so very dissimilar, you must recognize at once the difference in spirit with which Mr. Rylee writes this powerful, invincibly sincere and even noble novel of Southern life.

Not alone is it his vision and stout-heartedness in presenting Mose as one of the finest characters who has walked in the pages of recent American fiction. For beyond that, in the person of Miss Mary Winston, the white woman who is struggling as a lawyer in her home town and who sets out to defend Mose at his murder trial, Mr. Rylee affirms the conflict—so ingenuously overlooked by most Southern regional writers—between the ignorance, callousness and craven mutual connivance of the kitchen-garden variety of small-town people and the ardor, rare but indubitably present, of a few other citizens to maintain justice and defend innocence, even if the latter be in the person of an "ornery share-croppin' nigger."

* * * * *

IT is that conflict which gives excitement to this extraordinarily able first novel, and that breadth of outlook which gives it stature. See how acutely Mr. Rylee comes to the real point, when he has Mary think: "And how seldom men are judged on the facts of their lives. If you would attack a man most forcefully, there is no need to study the weaknesses of his character, for that is too arduous a process. Rather, seek out that day in his career when he has offended against the common level of society. Perhaps you will call him Tory, Hessian, red, atheist, communist, socialist, nigger or Christian. It only depends on the date and the geographical location as to what label will be most effective in rousing men against him."

And the supreme and telling irony of the book, as you will discover, is the fact that the spirit of Mose never needed human defense.

Old Dominion Takes Stock

Virginia Appears To Be Shifting From Traditional Party Lines To Horizontal Cleavage Across Both Parties, Charlottesville Observer Reports.

By George Marvin.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Charlottesville.

IT was an old-timer locomotive engineer on a Northern railroad who said: "Only 5 per cent of people in this country think, 10 per cent think they think and 85 per cent never even think about thinking." He went on to express an opinion that most or all of the 85 per cent drove motor cars, but however justly his figures tallied with his experience, he would have to modify his percentages in Virginia.

Considerably more than 5 per cent of the Old Dominion thinks. In the political past they have more often thought right than wrong, but, right or wrong, at least the community has kept on cerebrating. And right now it would be no exaggeration to say that more political thinking has been going on in Virginia than at any time since the Civil War—"since the war," Virginians say, to distinguish it from the World War.

Some of this thinking becomes very articulate, notably in the instances of the State's two Senators. The whole country listens to their thoughts in print or by air, but the State they represent brings a characteristic fondness to the listening: Of Carter Glass a big majority of Virginians, Republicans and Democrats alike, would say, "Our Senator, right or wrong!" And as for Harry Byrd, his utterances ring loyal bells in the Piedmont as well as through the Tidewater, even though their lilt has of late—so the thinkers think—taken on the underlying melody of presidential aspirations in the not too distant future.

* * * * *

AS to the value and trend of the present unusually high percentage of thought in the Old Dominion, the assayer's task is not so hard as in some other States. For one item there is the straw vote recently concluded by a Richmond paper, which harvested a two-to-one indorsement of President Roosevelt over the area covered by its circulation field. Although this method of tapping public opinion is open to obvious shortcomings, the upholders of the Administration point out that few people are likely to go to the trouble of filling out a reply blank unless they give the topic some thought.

These same ex parte judges, in several localities, also point out that the straw vote develops an opinion otherwise inarticulate as differentiated from naturally partisan organs or the channels whereby purely personal views find expression. Ignoring the oft-proved fact that nothing lies like a young statistic—or can be so easily twisted to support diametrically opposing arguments—these same party loyalists point to mounting figures in the building industries, notably in the Piedmont section, and to the partially effective assistance given to the embattled potato and tomato farmers in the southern counties.

Orchardists, however, the growers who make up the most important agricultural ingredient in the Piedmont and the Shenandoah Valley counties, are still decidedly from Missouri as to any noticeably better conditions affecting the marketing of their product. This year, with exceptionally favorable conditions of weather and a big crop on the trees, they face again arbitrary or unsatisfactory standards of inspection and a price range which has for years been discouraging.

* * * * *

ANOTHER optimistic group is composed of those who thrive on the various benefits of the tourist trade: the hotels and boarding houses, the purveyors of gas and the automobile fraternity, the real estate brotherhood, the retailers in every city and town and the advertisers. Concentrating through their chambers of commerce all over the State, a fund of $100,000 is now planned by the State Chamber, backed by the Governor and the county politicians, to swell the already rising tide of invaders during the approaching autumn season, when "Wingandacoa" (the "good land" of the Powhatan Indians) is at its loveliest and travel either by rail or motor vehicle is most comfortable.

Naturally, most of this partially articulate political reaction is founded as elsewhere on self-interest. But not all of it. Everyone talks glibly nowadays about the Constitution, but in this State, where the Constitution originated, more than an average number of citizens, male and female, after their kind, either already possess or are getting some knowledge of the Constitution and its implications in their conversation.

The result, as might be expected, works both ways, but the significant fact is that public opinion is not going blind. There has been an extraordinary amount of impromptu research both into the historical records available in every public library and differing versions of party platforms; people are reading something more than the headlines in their daily papers and the so-called "high-brow" magazines are being discovered.

For example, one man will point out that Virginia and New York were the most obdurate of the eleven States which established the Constitution in 1789, holding out for two years because of alleged infringements of State's rights, and there are others who lean toward Edmund Randolph's and Patrick Henry's State sovereignty rather than toward the centralizing influence of Madison, George Wythe, Mason and Washington.

* * * * *

ON the other hand there are those who value the influence of Jefferson, although it was exerted at long range across the Atlantic from Paris—in the framing of the Constitution, and they quote the great Democrat as leaning toward the urgent need of nationalism in foreign affairs and of a central authority to adjust the conflicting interests of 13 little empires.

Fundamentally this whole State is Jeffersonian in sentiment, but only the more erudite can quote from the Sage of Monticello with precise pertinence at this juncture. One document of relevance, read by Senator Barkley at the summer institute of the University of Virginia, almost in the shadow of the "little mountain" where the latter was written in 1816, has spread ripples widely. On July 12 in that year Jefferson wrote:

> Some men look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence and deem them, like the Ark of the Covenant, too sacred to be touched. They ascribe to the men of the preceding age a wisdom more than human, and suppose what they did to be beyond amendment.
> I knew that age well; I belonged to it and labored with it. * * * It was * * * without the experience of the present, and 40 years of experience in government is worth a century of book reading. * * * And this they would say themselves, were they to rise from the dead.
> I am certainly not an advocate for frequent and unfried changes in laws or constitutions. * * * but I know that laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind. As that becomes more developed * * * institutions must advance also and keep pace with the times.

* * * * *

COULD Thomas Jefferson come back to life today and join any interested group of his fellow Virginians, what an incredible readjustment he would survey! For he would find the Hamiltonians championing States' rights as the main purport of the Constitution and the inheritors of his own and Jackson's democracy trying to save the Nation by centralizing authority!

As for "F. D. R.," the present scape-goat of the considerably discredited New Deal, it is safe to say that a sizable majority of thinking Virginians feel that, however experimental some of his measures may have been, here is a man whose heart as well as his head is in his work. Many of these thinkers say they recognize a cleavage, across party lines, with his presidential kinsman who 30 years ago tried to swing progressive Republicanism toward the people and against the "malefactors of great wealth."

Both of the Roosevelts, these people say, "were natural born Bourbons," but both of them, if they erred, leaned toward the side of human rights. It is inconceivable that Republican doctrine as such in this State, in spite of the non-characteristic causes of the vote in 1928 against a Catholic and wet Democratic presidential candidate, can become representative of public opinion. But more and more one becomes aware of a shifting of the old political lines from a vertical and traditional party division to a horizontal cleavage across both parties. In other words, Virginia today is less divided in Republican and Democratic lines of thought than in the increasing tension of pro and anti administration.

Simple Moldings Give Room Nice Appearance

Many old living rooms have heavy, dark wood moldings placed about doors, windows, shelves, etc. Often these are wide and elaborately carved and tend to give a depressing aspect to a room otherwise pleasing in size and proportion. Removal of these "dust catchers" of a past era and the substitution of simple, flat moldings of light natural or painted wood will brighten a room as well as eliminate unnecessary corners that collect dirt and dust. Simple woodwork tends to keep the background of a room quiet and permits the furnishings to assume their proper importance.

Don't Mention It.

Westbrook Pegler

By Ralph E. Renaud

New Post Columnist.

AMONG all the columnist commentators who stud the newspapers and the current American back-drop with wisecracks and bright sayings, there is none more refreshing than Westbrook Pegler. He is a forthright kind of person with no axes to grind and no pillows to put under swelled heads. That is what has made him a national figure in newspaper work in a little more than a year.

Which doesn't mean that "Peg," as his friends and lots of others call him, hasn't got plenty of journalistic vista. Oh, no, he has knocked around quite a bit. He has been a cog in the newspaper grind, though an ever-growing cog, since 1916, so it looks now as though he were hopelessly smeared with printer's ink.

He got his break in Chicago, where a ot of good ones come from. But Pegler had a bit of a head start, having breathed the newspaper atmosphere from his babyhood days. His father, Arthur Pegler, was a newspaper man before him, and an able one. Westbrook Pegler didn't work long in Chicago. The United Press sent him abroad in 1916 as European correspondent and in the next two years he was attached as a reporter to the American Expeditionary Forces. He got a good look at war in the immediate vicinity of the trenches but that didn't stop him from enlisting in the Navy, in which he served in 1918 and '19.

* * * * *

Then he became sports editor of the United News where he remainco until 1925 when he was made Eastern sports correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. It was then that he began to make his reputation as a frank cynic toward the shoddiness which prevails in a good many fields of sports. The "fight game" and wrestling, for instance, were merely rackets to him, and he wrote about them in no Pollyanna vein. He still writes about sports when the notion strikes him and, though skins are tough in that department, he can usually be depended on to cause a little high, wide and fancy writhing.

The New York Evening Post used Pegler under the title of "Speaking Out on Sports" and his appearance there helped to establish him in New York. He was undoubtedly more interested in the New York scene than in Chicago reactions to it, which probably explains why he went to the New York World Telegram in 1933. The Scripps-Howard people recognized his ability and gave him a national platform.

At first Pegler seemed a little embarrassed by having a national audience and didn't appear to know exactly what to write about, falling back a good deal on his old interest in sports. But he soon found himself. All was not clear sailing, however. In 1933 he wrote a piece about the lynching of the two kidnaper-murderers in San Jose in which he seemed to defend the instinct of the crowd to put brutes of that type out of the way as expeditiously as possible. This was immediately followed by a protest issued by the Anti-Lynching League and signed by 83 prominent writers. But it soon developed (the very same day, in fact) that none of the writers had been consulted about the use of his name. Many of them came forward to uphold Pegler's right to say whatever he pleased. So the protest didn't get very far.

Pegler has been saying what he pleased ever since. He is neither of the right nor the left and, unlike other columnists, permits his opponents to have some opinions of their own. But he can defend himself in a brawl and can pull the stuffed shirt off a man's back more quickly than most. He has a gift for robust satire which is sometimes merely amusing and sometimes bites like nitric acid. Like most good sports writers he can do magic with words and his viewpoint is broadening and mellowing all the time. He manages to reflect the average American viewpoint and has a habit of not getting off on the wrong foot.

Pegler was born in Minneapolis in 1894 and got his education at the Loyola Academy in Chicago. He is married and lives in New Canaan, Conn., when he isn't in Washington or New York. He is a member of several clubs, including the Dutch Treat Club, for whose last show he wrote one of the cleverest skits on the program. That was about a lynching, too, and showed how the colored folk might feel about the peccadillos of an old Uncle Tom white man if they happened to be in control. A lot of people said it was too daring. But they're always saying that about Pegler.

By William Lyon Phelps.

IN Francis Hackett's brilliant recent biography of "King Henry VIII" of England, who reigned from 1509 to 1547, there is a most dramatic account of the visit paid by King Henry to King Francis the First of France, and of the famous and elaborate Field of the Cloth of Gold. It is one of the most interesting episodes in a very interesting book.

How astonished both the French and the English King would have been had they known that this was the last visit that any English monarch would pay to France for 300 years! Yet in fact, the next reigning soverign of England to set foot in France was Queen Victoria, who traveled thither in 1843. The Daily Telegraph for June 15 of this year said, "We may say now that her journey marked the end of the ages of strife and distrust between the two nations."

* * * * *

Queen Victoria again visited France in 1855, because France and England were then allies in the war against Russia. Subsequently, Lord Salisbury said in that particular war England had backed the wrong horse.

On this occasion the Queen wrote that old enmities and rivalries were wiped out, and that she returned home with real affection for and interest in France.

King Edward was always fond of the French, and in 1903 he made his famous visit thither when the agreements were made, and the Entente Cordiale signed, which gave the King great satisfaction.

* * * * *

Ten years later King George V was in Paris speaking of the friendship between the two nations as "a precious inheritance for the generations to come." During the World War King George and Queen Mary were several times in France.

The Daily Telegraph, commenting on the friendship shown by France on Jubilee Day, May 6 of this year, said "The friendship . . . thus assured endures and will endure for the safety, honor and welfare of both nations." But in a very few days came the English naval compact with Germany, which caused rather bitter comment in France.

Just as the morality of the average individual is higher than the morality of the average nation, so I fear that the friendship between nations is based more on interest, than is the friendship between individuals.

Venus stepped down from her pedestal at the Corcoran Art Gallery and sighed enviously. There was a wistful look in her eyes as she patted her hair back into place.

"You don't know what breaks these modern women get," she moaned. "Now, in my day, things were different."

We leaned against a glass case and listened to her plaintive tale.

"Why," she continued, "when I wanted vanishing cream or a new lipstick I had to send that flighty daughter-in-law of mine, Psyche, over to Proserpine's house across the River Styx to get it and, would you believe it, I tramped all the way from Olympus to the Parthenon without finding a single decent Beauty Shoppe! And you know how catty those Athenian newspapermen could be. That awful Aristophanes, who had that scurrilous column in the Daily Gazette, actually said that if I got another wrinkle my face would look like a prune skin.

"But these modern women have all their beauty and personality problems solved by Frances Mangum, of The Washington Post, and she knows ever so much more about beauty than I did." She smiled shyly. "But then, I had my moments. There was that dear boy, Praxiteles . . ."

Well, since Beauty is Truth, Venus was right: Miss Washington does get a break. All she has to do to keep her nose from being shiny or her chins from doubling is to follow Frances Mangum's advice in The Post. Frances knows her cosmetics, whether they're to be used to please a sweetheart, hold a husband, or make the blonde next door jealous. She tells you where to get 'em, how to apply 'em, and, when the date is over, how to peel 'em off. In short, Frances' column is the answer to a perplexed maiden's prayer.

And Handsome being what Handsome does, Frances also advises you on ways to develop your personality . . . how to acquire that charm which will make men want to shower you with attentions . . . and other women long to cut your throat. Even Madame de Stael could have profited from our Frances' column.

If you have wrinkles instead of dimples . . . circles instead of curves . . . girl-friends instead of boy-friends . . . let Miss Mangum tell you the reason why. Follow her advice and you'll have that movie-actress figure . . . that peaches-and-cream complexion . . . those come-hither eyes . . . and a lot more fun. Her column is found each Sunday on the Household Pages of

Gen. Kilbourne Is Promoted By Roosevelt

Harbor Defense Comander at Philippines Wins Advancement.

Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne has been selected by President Roosevelt to become a major general, it was stated at the War Department yesterday.

Formerly an assistant chief of staff in charge of the war plans division at the War Department, Gen. Kilbourne came into prominence recently when his testimony to a House committee concerning a "camouflaged air base" near the Canadian border was revealed inadvertently.

The new major general fills the acancy caused by the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman July 6. At the same time it was announced that Cols. Charles Frederick Humphrey, jr., and Laurence Halsead would be elevated to the rank of brigadier generals.

Col. Humphrey fills the vacancy created by Gen. Kilbourne's promotion, while Col. Halstead will move up due to the retirement this month of Brig. Gen. Otho B. Rosenbaum.

Col. Humphrey's nomination for appointment as a brigadier general to rank from September 1, 1935, was confirmed by the Senate May 7. His name has been resubmitted with a view to his promotion to an earlier vacancy arising since the Senate confirmation.

At present in command of the harbor defenses of Manila and Subic bays, Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, Gen. Kilbourne holds the Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal as well as a number of foreign decorations.

Entering the regular service from civil life during the Spanish-American War, Coly. Humphrey holds the D. S. M. At present he is on duty at Fort McDowell, Calif.

Co. Halstead was graduated from the United States Miliary Academy in 1899. He holds a D. S. M. At present he commands the Twelfth Infantry at Fort Howard, Md. In sending the names to the Senate the President acted on the recommendation of Secretary of War Dern.

Official-Elect Slain in Senate Of Argentina

Farm Minister, Deputy Are Hurt in Shooting During Fight on Floor.

By the United Press.

Buenos Aires, July 23.—Senator-elect Bordabehere, of Santa Fe, was shot and killed and Minister of Agriculture Luis Duhau and Deputy Mancini wounded during a shooting in the Senate today.

Police threw a cordon about the building, barring newspapermen.

The shooting came during the government's investigation of the meat industry. It was reported Finance Minister Federico Pinedo was speaking and debate was heated. Senator de la Torre approached the finance minister, apparently to hear better. De la Torre immediately called him a "coward who would not dare fight a duel."

Duhau intervened and a scuffle started. De la Torre was knocked down and shooting started. Duhau was shot through the right hand. Mancini, who was in the Senate as a visitor, was shot in the side.

Gunman Forced Pair to Try Embezzlement, Police Told.

Arrested when he attempted to cash a check for $8,000, while a gunman allegedly waited outside the bank for him, George Hewitt, of Arlington County, Va., was held at Upper Marlboro yesterday for investigation.

With him when he entered the First National Bank of Southern Maryland; was Homer King, a boarder at the Hewitt home in Virginia. King was not taken into custody.

The pair told Prince Georges County police they were held up Monday night as they were eating dinner at the Hewitt home. The gunman forced them into a car bearing New York tags, they said.

Told to Seize Bank Book.

With their assailant driving, they were carried around a wide circuit and, shortly after dawn, reached the home of King's brother, Oscar King at Piscataway, Md., police were told.

Hewitt was sent into the house with a note ordering Oscar King to hand over his bank book, according to the story. King refused. The brother was then sent in and the bank book was confiscated.

The two prisoners were then carried to the bank at Upper Marlboro and told to draw out all the Piscataway man's money, a total of $8,000. The gunman said he would be waiting outside and a false move would be fatal.

Teller Is Suspicious.

At the teller's window the men were confronted by William S. Hill, cashier, who became suspicious of their intentions and asked them into his office.

The delay is said to have caused the gunman outside to become suspicious. He fled. Police broadcast a lookout for the numbers of the New York car, furnished them by Hewitt and King.

Suspect in Murder Hunted in Kentucky

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Jonesville, Va., July 23.—The hunt for Green Allen Brooks, 63-year-old mountaineer wanted for the murder of two Lee County officers, has swung across the State border into Bell County, Ky.

Sheriff R. F. Giles of Lee County said today he was positive Brooks was hiding in the mountain regions near the Kentucky-Tennessee-Virginia border, and was receiving aid from moonshiners. Twenty men have pushed through tangled underbrush, toiled up mountains and ransacked gorges in the Virginia area in a vain search for the hillman and additional possemen have combed other sections.

Man Using Drill Is Electrocuted

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23.—Ivan E. Sheffler, 33, superintendent of the knitting department of the Waynesboro, Pa., Knitting Co.'s mill here was electrocuted late last night while working at the mill.

Sheffler was drilling a hole in a metal cabinet, the butt of the drill resting against his chest. It is thought that the 120 volts of the current paralyzed his heart. Efforts to revive him failed.

Sheffler is survived by the widow and one child.

Military Road Closing Fought By Civic Group

Arlington Meeting Asks New Thoroughfare for County.

Opposition to the closing of Military road, which bisects Washington-Hoover Airport, unless a suitable alternate route is provided, was expressed last night at a joint meeting of the executive ecommitte of the Arlington County Civic Federation and the board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce.

The joint meeting, which was attended by members of three other county civic associations, indorsed the position of the county board of supervisors and Representative Howard F. Smith, who are demanding the creation of another thoroughfare to the Highway Bridge if Military road is closed.

A resolution adopted at the meeting pointed out that the county had used Military road for a quarter of a century and pointed out that right should not be taken away unless a new road is provided without expense to the county.

Other organizations which attended the meeting were the Columbia Pike Improvement Association, the Jefferson Citizens Association and the Arlington Ridge Citizens Association.

Man Shot From Ambush Near Mine at Philippi

Philippi, W. Va., July 23.—Shot from ambush at night, near the Meriden coal mine, No. 4, a mile from Philippi, Harry Phillips, FERA worker, of Meriden, is near death in a hospital here.

Physicians said he was blinded in the left eye by a mysterious blast from a shotgun and may lose the sight of the other eye, if he recovers. He was walking along railroad tracks with his wife and a neighbor when the shooting occurred.

Firemen Plan Annual Parley At Conference

Visitors From Three States to Attend Conference Opening Tonight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Confluence, Pa., July 23.—The annual convention of the Somerset County Volunteer Firemen's Association, which opens tomorrow for the rest of the week, will attract volunteer firemen from three States. Companies from Allegany and Garrett counties, Md., and Preston County, W. Va., have accepted invitations to join with the more than 40 companies of Somerset County. Cambria, Westmoreland and Fayette counties, Pa., also will be represented.

The housing problem has been solved by the erection of tents. More than 1,000 firemen will attend. Old home week also is being sponsored by the Confluence firemen this week.

Burgess H. L. Sellers will deliver the key of the city to the visiting firemen tomorrow night.

Officers will be named and next year's meeting place selected Thursday morning. This will be followed by the annual parade and contests in which more than $200 in cash prizes will be awarded. The judges will be William E. DeBolt, of Connellsville; W. H. Long, of South Connellsville, and L. L. Langer, of Johnstown.

Friday will be Americanization Day, with the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy Scouts, United Mine Workers and CCC conducting programs. Somerset County Council, Boy Scouts of America, will hold its annual campfire. In the evening there will be a parade of these groups with lodges and Sunday school children. Thirty mine unions will be in line.

Saturday will be Farmers' Day. R. N. Benjamin, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Federation, will speak. The convention will end Saturday night with fireworks.

New Stay Granted In 'Well Murder'

Time Is Allowed to Seek Coleman Case Writ.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—John Shell and Joe Jackson, Negroes convicted of the "well murder" of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman in Spotsylvania County, were granted their second reprieve today by Gov. George C. Perry. They were to have been electrocuted Friday at the State Penitentiary.

The stay extends to August 28 in order that E. A. Norrell, Richmond Negro attorney, may have additional time to seek a writ of error from the Supreme Court of Appeals.

Shell and Jackson were originally sentenced to die on June 21, but the Governor granted a reprieve until July 26 to permit the filing of an appeal, which was brought before Judge Frederick Coleman at Fredericksburg, who ruled that the case had then passed from the jurisdiction of his court.

Transients, Beggars Ineligible for Pension

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23.—Professional beggars, panhandlers and individuals whom police term "floaters" will not be eligible for old-age pensions here, according to James R. Black, clerk to the board of county commissioners.

Approximately 200 persons on the eligible list for pensions have filed applications with the county board. Their applications will be turned over to Miss Alice Edmonds, executive secretary of the Welfare Federation. A check of applications, Black said, shows a number of ineligible persons have filed.

$244,400 Work In Dominion Parks Is Asked

Money for Improvements Would Come From U. S. Relief Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—Requests have been filed for the National Park Service for improvements in the Government park set-up in Virginia costing $244,400, Wilbur G. Hall, chairman of the State conservation and development commission, was informed today. The money would be part of that appropriated by the Government for work relief.

A detailed account of the proposed improvements was given by Charels J. Calrow, consultant-director of the Virginia State Planning Board.

A total of $88,000 is sought for radio, telephone or electric systems in the Colonial National Monument area, county battlefields and Memorial National Military Park; the George Washington Birthplace National Monument, and the Shenandoah National Park.

For "physical improvements," $91,000 will be spent in the Colonial National Monument, the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County Battlefield Memorial, and the Washington Birthplace Monument.

A sum of $67,200 is sought for water and sewer systems for the Colonial National Monument, the Fredericksburg Memorial area, the Washington Birthplace Monument area and the Shenandoah National Park.

Calrow said he expected further information on what "physical improvements" were to be included in the $91,000 item.

State Highway Worker Is Pinned Under Auto

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., July 23.—Raymond Housden, 21, State highway department employe, was in a critical condition in a local hospital today as a result of injuries suffered when his automobile plunged over an embankment near here early yesterday morning.

Housden, who was on his way to work when the accident occurred, remained pinned under the wreckage a half hour before he was found by workmen. Besides internal injuries, he is reported to have a broken hip.

School Chief Opposes Aid.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 23.—G. W. Ropp, superintendent of the Berkeley County school system, will recommend that no assistant be named until possible necessity is demonstrated, he said today. He pointed out the provision of an assistant is optional in certain counties.

CRITICS have meant it sincerely enough. They have said of Westbrook Pegler that he has the drollery of Ring Lardner, the iconoclasm of Henry Mencken, the homely insight of Will Rogers. These are tributes any writer might envy.

BUT they are more suggestions of the truth than the truth itself. Westbrook Pegler has humor, he has impatience with false idols, he has shrewd humanness. But they are of his own. They are no one else's.

For Westbrook Pegler is not Lardner, and not Mencken and not Rogers. He is Pegler. The most trenchant, vivid and fair newspaper commentator that this country has as yet developed.

HIS column will appear daily in The Post beginning tomorrow. Look for it. You'll find it always new and alive, bound for somewhere . . . and getting there every time. But more than that, you'll find it individual, distinctive . . . well, you'll find it's Pegler. And you'll like that!

Cool Reception For Heat Wave At 'Hot Spots'

Barnee of the Shoreham Wrote a Song That You Can't 'Ho-hum.'

By Chanticleer.

The gentlemen of the bands are devoting themselves to the writing of dance ditties these torrid days. Now there's Barnee . . . the same baton brandishing Barnee of the Shoreham . . . who has written a very humable little thing . . . but so help me . . . it is with no ordinary, garden variety regret that I confess the title has slipped my mind.

The melody is swell . . . plenty of swing and lyrics to match . . . despite a sneaking suspicion that Barnee decided to play a few holes of golf just two-thirds of the way through the chorus . . . and buttoned it up hurriedly. But ten minutes alone at the piano . . . and that would be ironed out as smooth as the Terrace dance floor.

• • • •

And then there's the new tune the customers at the Lotus are beginning to demand . . . Lew Davie's "A Date With You" . . . which has been used by Bill Strickland's Capitolians on their network broadcasts from the Lotus . . . and which tickled a listener out in Wisconsin into writing to request for more of it.

It all places me in a spot . . . not remembering Barnee's song by name . . . and never having heard Lew's tune as yet. Those little details will be taken care of before another day has passed. However, you can hear both by asking Barnee to play his new tune any time during the Shoreham cocktail hour when he is always found at the piano . . . or when you drop in for downtown supper at the Lotus.

• • • •

Guy Scott sits on the Arlington roof these nights with an I'm-going-away-for-a-vacation look in his eye . . . but the low-down is where the vacation is to be taken. Guy looks at the night breeze ripple over the Habana tablecloths . . . and refreshing the dancing couples . . . but his mind is at work on plans for the reopening of the Connecticut avenue Club Habana . . . when the citizenry will be wanting a warm place for the evening . . . not the cooling star ceiling of the roof. The plans call for an extensive survey of New York supper club talent ready for booking this fall . . . for just such spots as the Club Habana.

• • • •

When you see her . . . and hear her voice over the crystal waters of the pool . . . you'll want to know her name. So I'll tell you that Enriqueta is the Spanish prima donna who tops the new bill at Maryland Club Gardens. Supporting her is the rhythm team of Phillipe and Yvonne . . . who make that platform on the far side of the pool conscious of the terpsichore as never before . . . with a new brand of taps . . . and, of course, Charlie Mayer, conducting the affairs of the evening, and Bob Dunnington with his accordion and likable grin.

• • • •

Latest reports from Griffith Farms indicate that Congress is going to stay in session a long time . . . It seems that the great trees forming a roof over the outdoor dining room and the cooling evening winds blowing through the verandas . . . and the cocktail lounge and all . . . more than compensates for the hot day on the Hill.

• • • •

Ramon is proud of his weather prognosticator . . . Joe, by name, and a waiter by calling . . . But if you want to know whether to take that trip to Philadelphia by auto or train tomorrow, just get your weather bearings first from Joe . . . He'll squint up in the general direction of the "Powhatan" banner on the roof pole and usually what he says will happen . . . does happen!

• • • •

On the bill at the Lotus this week are Marian and Bea, in rhythmic taps and acrobatics . . . Rahda, of the land of the Wikki-Wakki . . . Joan Zappa in a burlesque tap dance . . . and the Bernays, who have just returned from a tour of Canada with Lee Shelley's "Silver Jubilee" band, as featured dancers . . . And the Shoreham presents for the fourth week those very likeable exponents of ballroom dancing—Ruthenia and Malcolm . . . and Howard Montgomery, novelty and tap dancer, and other entertainment of the Gardner Moore high quality.

• • • •

Something is going on every minute at the Hangar Club . . . what with a full band . . . Joe and Jack and their guitars and mandolins . . . Chico and his ventriloquist papa . . . and impromptu floor performances that spring up from the ringside tables. And when the rest of the town is just going to bed . . . the Hangar Club is just calling in the full force of waiters and getting under full steam . . . At 2 o'clock the fun is just beginning.

• • • •

Well worth your time: The Cotton Club's singing artist . . . who does a number entitled "Brown Boy," I believe . . . a real artist . . . who is so far beyond the modest applause he received from the ringsiders last night.

Pennsylvania Relief Rolls Down 130,000

Director, Completing Six Months' Service, Reports Progress in Work.

There were 1,615,822 persons on Pennsylvania relief rolls July 6, almost 130,000 fewer than the peak figure for 1935, according to the report which has been submitted to the State emergency relief board by its executive director, Robert L. Johnson.

The second week in April showed the highest total of the year—1,743,579.

"In my opinion," Johnson stated in his report, "considerable progress in relief administration has been made in the last six months, despite the distraction of attacks upon us which, for a time, tended to upset the administration and confuse its thinking."

Submission of the report marks the completion of six months' service by Johnson as executive director of the relief board. During his tenure he has led a campaign against relief chiselers which resulted in many of them receiving jail sentences.

Another reform instituted by Johnson was the establishment of a special department to deal with organizations of the unemployed. Arrangements were made with 16 anthracite coal operators, producing 94.6 per cent of the total Pennsylvania anthracite tonnage, under which they will deduct no more than 10 per cent from the pay of mine workers receiving less than $15 a week for back debts at company stores. The maximum is 20 per cent for miners receiving more than $15 a week.

"I have recently approved an experimental investigation," said Johnson, "into the eligibility of non-family men. This problem is exceptionally difficult, in that there is no definite home to which the relief recipient is tied."

Collateral Forfeited In 8-Hour Law Case

Marilyn's, Inc., a hosiery shop in the 900 block of Fourteenth street northwest, forfeited $20 collateral in Police Court yesterday for alleged violations of the female eight-hour labor law.

A representative of the company, Samuel E. Schaef, was arraigned before Judge Robert E. Mattingly to answer charges of employing Lee Kay, Virginia Baker and Katherine Baker more than the eight hours prescribed by law and failing to keep an accurate time record.

CapeCentaur HomeOwner Guest Here

Mrs. Stewart Arrives From Country House Near Easton.

She and Husband Will Motor to Colorado Ranch in August.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mrs. Glenn Stewart arrived yesterday from her country home, Cape Centaur House, near Easton, Md., and is stopping at the Mayflower during her brief stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart used to spend each winter in Washington, but in recent years they have passed several months every winter in Washington Beach, Fla., where they have a charming villa. Their cabana at the Surf Club is one of the most attractive of the handsome ones in the club. Red leather modernistic furniture is used for the terrace, and inside the same color is used with black and silver in ultra-modern fashion. There is a small sitting room in the cabana, and a tiny black lacquer bar. There also are two dressing rooms, one for ladies done in deep blue, sprinkled with stars, and one for the men with every convinence for those who spend entire days at the beach.

Cape Centaur House, where Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have been since returning from Florida, is one of the magnificent estates of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Hundreds of acres are enclosed by a high fence, and inside are splendid trees, streams for fishing, and woods for hunting. The house itself is gracious and rambling, and there Mr. and Mrs. Stewart entertain frequently for their Washington and New York friends.

Mrs. Stewart raises the finest Irish wolf hounds in this country at Centaur House; great, shaggy creatures that seem more than half wolf in appearance, but which in reality are gentle, well-trained pets, many of them measuring more than eight feet in height when they stand on their hind legs.

Mrs. Stewart will rejoin Mr. Stewart at their country home in a few days, and next month they will leave by motor for their ranch in Colorado to spend several weeks. Several years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart toured this country in a motor car to which was attached a luxurious trailer fitted with living room, bedrooms, and tiny complete kitchen. They lived in this rolling house during their trip, and stopped in few towns, preferring to camp in some lovely spot whenever they were ready to stop for a night or even for several days of fishing and hunting if they desired.

Hot Springs Set Enjoys Tennis

Miss Wolff, Miss Ingalls and Miss Wardman Among Tourney Entrants.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hot Springs, Va., July 23.—Participating in the women's tennis tournament were Miss Eliza Kent Wolff, Mrs. Mary Carignani, Miss Abbie Ingalls, Miss M. de Greef, Miss Mary Geary, Miss Mary Ann Steene, Miss Frances Carter and Miss Helen Wardman.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Andre de Laboulaye entertained at dinner last night and afterward attended a concert. They returned to Washington by motor.

The Undersecretary of State, Mr. William Phillips, will join the summer colony at the Homestead tomorrow. Latest arrivals include the Greek Minister, Demetrios Seciliianos, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. D. Carter and Miss Frances Carter, of Washington.

LombardsOccupying Ocean City Cottage

Mrs. Carusi at Cape May for the Season.

The Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, with their young son, Charles Francis Lombard, are occupying a cottage at Ocean City, N. J., for several weeks. Later they will go to Maine for the remainder of the summer.

Mme. Lombard's mother, Mrs. Charles Francis Carusi, has taken a cottage at Cape May, N. J., for the season and has her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, and their infant daughter with her.

Harvey Gordons, of N. Y., Staying in D. C., Virginia

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Gordon, of New York City, are dividing their time between the Mayflower and nearby Virginia, while the former is here taking charge of the erection of the camp in South Washington, Va., to be occupied by the Boy Scouts next month.

Popular Young Couple on West Virginia Holiday

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose snapped as they set out for a round of golf at the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis Club at White Sulphur Springs, where they are spending some time. Mrs. DuBose is wearing a sleveless golf frock of white linen and her hat is of red and white quilted silk to match her belt.

Mrs. Ickes Off For New Mexico On August 5

Mrs. John Herrick to Be Companion on Trip of Several Weeks.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will leave August 5 for New Mexico. She visits in the Southwest each summer and has her own adobe house on the edge of the desert in Coolidge, N. Mex.

Mrs. Ickes seldom misses the time of the great ceremonials held each year near Gallup during the latter part of August.

Mrs. Ickes will be accompanied by Mrs. John Herrick. They plan to pass several weeks in the heart of the Navajo country making excursions by motor into the desert to visit the Indian reservations.

Mrs. Ickes is a keen student of Indian lore, the anthropology of the Southwest being her greatest enthusiasm after her family. For years she has been a friend of the Pueblo and Navajo Indians.

Mrs. Ickes has written a book, "Mesa Land," which is a history of the Southwestern part of the United States. Into it she has woven knowledge of these tribes gained through many years of close study of them.

Mrs. Ickes will be away until the middle of September when she will rejoin the Secretary at Hayes, their home in Chevy Chase, Md., which they have leased from Mr. and Mrs. G. Thomas Dunlop for two years.

C. S. McConnell Visiting on Bay

Dividing Time Between the Chesapeake and 16th Street Home.

Mr. Chalmers Seymour McConnell, who has been in mourning for more than a year for his mother, the late Mrs. Samuel Burleigh Milton, is dividing the early part of the summer between his home on Sixteenth street and his country place on the Chesapeake Bay.

Later in the season he expects to spend some time at Rehoboth Beach, Del., and in the mountains of Pennsylvania.

The Bordens Give Party in Country

Commander and Mrs. John T. Borden entertained at a house party in their country home near Annapolis over the week-end. Among the guests were Commander and Mrs. Charles S. Stephenson, who have just come to Washington from Samoa. Dr. Ovid C. Foote also was a guest.

Commander and Mrs. Borden have gone to Annapolis from the West Coast. The former is on duty at the Naval Academy.

'Colonels' Dine In Style Typical Of Blue Grass

Mint, Old Whisky and Fast Horses Form the Place Card Motif.

A new and decidedly militant organization was formed last night at the Chevy Chase Club when Kentucky Colonels who have survived recent campaigns in Washington were brought together for a dinner served in a typical blue grass manner.

The committee in charge bowed to convention in the matter of mint, old whisky and fast horses as decorations for the place cards, but ruled against beautiful women. The dinner was exclusively for men. A bottle of "Kentucky Colonel Whisky," named for Washington's veterans, was placed at each plate in lieu of conventional charged water.

Col. Marvin McIntyre, who is absent from Washington on a Pacific Coast tour, selected as the White House representative Col. Edward Starling, who was a veteran Kentucky colonel many years before Gov. Ruby Laffoon took office. In addition, a special relaxation of rules permitted former Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, to serve as toastmaster on the ground that one of his predecessors had complained to a Kentucky Governor on an important historic occasion about prolonged intermissions between libations. Another relaxation permitted Col. E. C. Kennedy, vice president of National Distillers, and not a District of Columbia colonel, to fly down from New York to become a special guest.

Bona fide Kentucky Colonels from Washington at the dinner included Assistant Secretary of Labor Turner Battle, Mr. William Meredith, Mr. Frank Morse, Mr. George O'Conor, Mr. Eugene Leggett, Mr. John Kratz, Mr. John Wynn, Mr. Arthur Harnett, Mr. Milton Kronheim, Mr. Genneth Watson, Dr. Bernard Cohen, Mr. Tudor Morsel, Mr. Leo Sugrue, Mr. Lee Poe Hart, Mr. Myron M. Parker, Mr. Paul Meyers, Mr. Louis Moross, Mr. Jerome B. McKee, Mr. Nathan Wallach, Mr. Junior Kronheim, Mr. Harry Bellmore and Mr. Raymond C. Lewis.

Store Will Put New Fur Coats On View Today

Two Fashion Shows Are Scheduled in an Air-Cooled Room.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

ALTHOUGH it probably kills you to think about fur coats in this weather, now is the time to start looking around for something chic for the fall. Why not get ahead of the crowd, and make your fur coat selection now? A downtown department store is staging two fashion shows today, featuring the latest and newest in fur coats and jackets. And you needn't worry about the heat, for the show is being held in an air-cooled room. We peeked at some of the models before time, and they are simply stunning. Swagger lapin coats with belts, very youthful and chic, elegant broadtail with squirrel collars, and swanky seal coats trimmed in silver fox are just a few of the many different styles being shown. And the prices! We almost didn't believe it when we were told that some of the smartest models sell for as little as $58. Furthermore, even the luxurious ones in sealskin and broadtail cost no more than $159. The linings are made of the newest materials, and display an attention to detail rarely found in inexpensive coats. The store is putting special emphasis on coats for junior misses. There is a grand selection, made of youthful materials cut on youthful lines. The two showings will be held at 11 o'clock in the morning and 2:30 in the afternoon. Be sure to see it—you will gain some interesting ideas on what is being worn this year in the coat line. Models will also display the latest from Paris in hats, which, we hear, are new and exciting.

Cellophane Sun Tan Capes.

IT SOUNDS impossible, but it's true. In the bathing department of a Washington store, there's an extraordinary outfit consisting of a thigh-length cape and hat which prevents sunburn and makes you tan at the same time. The secret is this: cape and hat are made of cellophane. This marvelous material lets in all the tanning qualities of the sun without allowing burning or blistering. You wear it over your bathing suit, and the effect is extremely chic. It is girlish and youthful without being kittenish, if you know what we mean. Now you can spend hours and hours on the beach, beneath a blazing sun, and by the end of the day you will be a rich, golden brown instead of a beefy red. Good-bye to blisters! Farewell to painful burns! Just arm yourself with one of these outfits, and forget you ever worried about sunburn. Both hat and cape cost only $1.95.

Beauty Secret Disclosed.

THE WOMEN who have made the greatest dent in history—Cleopatra and Helen of Troy, for instance—undoubtedly had some special beauty secrets which we would give almost anything to know. Although the secret of their charm is lost to the ages, of one thing we are sure—they depended a great deal for their beauty on the use of rich and fragrant oils. They knew that a daily rubdown with oil is the ideal way to keep one's skin soft and smooth.

Now all women may follow their example. A downtown store has on sale some bottles of a specially prpeared oil which contains all the beneficial qualities one could wish for. While we don't guarantee that one application will make your career as glamorous as Cleopatra's, we do assure you that it will work wonders on your skin. It is equally effective in your shower as well as your bath. Gently rub a few drops of this delicate balm onto your skin, let it penetrate a moment, and your body will retain its elusive scent for several days. It is the perfect massage lotion to stimulate your skin texture to an invigorating lightness. Not only is it a haunting perfume, but a healing and soothing lotion for chapped skin, sunburn and other skin irritations. It will impart a velvety smoothness to your skin. You can get a generous trial bottle for $1.

Cake Is the Foundation For Delicious Desserts

Children Are Sure to Like Ice Cream-Chocolate Sauce Concoction.

By Dorothea Duncan.

LET THE "cake eaters" have their cake. Make up your largest and fluffiest recipe for a plain golden fine textured cake. Bake part of the batter as cup cakes, the rest in a loaf pan, or make part as a loaf and the rest as a sheet cake. You will have enough cake for at least three desserts, and each time the dessert will be "cakey" enough to suit the greatest cake lover, but there will also be enough of a variation to make each desssert just a little bit different.

If you have made some cup cakes don't frost them, but when they are cool enough, split each one close to the top so that the piece which has been cut off will resemble the lid of a jack-in-the-box. Hollow out the center of each box, save the crumbs from the inside, for you are going to use them tomorrow or the next day. Keep the centers of the cup cakes in a tin box.

Now fill the center of each with sweetened red raspberries. Cover the berries with the piece which has been sliced from the cup cake. Garnish with sweetened and flavored whipped cream and two or three whole perfect berries.

The loaf cake may be cut in thin pieces and each two slices spread sandwich fashion with vanilla ice cream. Top off the sandwich with a chocolate peppermint sauce. The children will love this one. On the second day serve what is left of the loaf cake as cottage pudding. Choose a warm lemon sauce if the cake has become just the least bit dry; if not serve it with butterscotch sauce.

The sheet cake may be cut in small diamond shaped blocks and frosted with pink, yellow or pale green toppings. There is no more perfect accompaniment for water-ice or sherbet than these small cakes with delicate pastel toppings.

Now for the centers that we removed from the cup cakes and any other scraps of cake that may be left from the loaf or sheet cake. These scraps can be transformed into a delectable orange refrigerator cake.

Orange Refrigerator Cake.

2 cups water
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons plain gelatine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup orange juice
Pulp of 1 orange, shredded
2 cups cream
½ pound marshmallows
Leftover cake or 24 lady fingers
1 cup chopped nuts

Boil water and sugar 20 minutes. Soak gelatine in cold water to cover, 5 minutes. Add to boiling sirup. Add lemon juice and strain. Add orange juice and pulp, and chill in refrigerator. Beat until light. Add cream which has been whipped and cut up marshmallows. Add chopped nuts.

Line loaf cake pan with oiled paper, and place thin slices of cake around edge. Crumble remaining cake mixture. Put crumbs, nut and cream mixture in pan in alternate layers. Top layer should be made of crumbs. Chill in food compartment of refrigerator. Serve in slices. Serves 8 to 10.

If lady fingers are used instead of stale cake, separate them and line the sides of the pan placing the fingers upright. Crumble the remaining lady fingers and proceed as directed above.

TODAY'S DINNER MENU.

Jellied tomato consomme with lemon slices
Tuna fish a la king in toast cases
Julienne potatoes
Buttered lima beans
Cucumber and green pepper salad
Ice cream sandwich with chocolate peppermint sauce
Iced tea Milk (for children)

Empress of Japan Dons Ancient Girdle

Custom Used to Announce Approaching Birth.

In this country columnists announce "blessed events," often before parents themselves are sure of an impending birth. But in Japan there's another way of telling the story—particularly when a royal child is expected.

Accordingly, Empress Nagako, now staying at Hayama with Emperor Hirohito, recently donned the ancient girdle which by court tradition must be worn by the sovereign's wife to announce the approaching birth of a royal child. Immediately after she put on the historic girdle, a hundred midwives, representing the Japanese Midwives' Association, met to pray at the Meiji Shrine that the Empress might have a successfull delivery. The child is expected in December.

Community Group Formed by Widows

Widows in Homer, N. Y., are making it a club affair, according to a report of the Associated Press. Thirty-one former wives in that part of the country recently organized the Merry Widow Club and agreed not to marry within a year, or pay a fine of $1 to the treasurer.

Mrs. Jennie Marcy mothered the idea, explaining it as follows: "It's just a fancy. There are so many widows in Homer and other nearby towns that I thought it would be entertaining to have them meet as a group."

Meetings will be held once a year.

Slacks and Halter That Fit Can Be Made at Low Cost

Pattern No. 738.

SPORTS CLOTHES THAT FIT well are never inexpensive, unless you make them. And then they have the twin virtues of trim fit and low cost.

These slacks may or may not have the extension above the waist line. They fasten at the side under the pocket. The halter ties around the neck and just above the waist line in the back. The pattern, accurately cut and easy to follow, is available in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3⅜ yards of 35-inch fabric for the slacks and 1⅝ yards for the halter.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Readers Give Suggestions for Discouraging Advances of "Mashers."

By Mary Haworth.

SIGNING herself "Annoyed," a woman reader of this column wrote in a few weeks ago, asking for suggestions on how to deal tactfully with a situation which she professed to find herself frequently confronted; namely, that of having some strange man rudely and inconsiderately jostling against her while occupying an adjoining seat in moving picture theaters.

• • • •

She was advised that a direct freezing glance, a half audible exclamation or an impatient gesture might well convey to the offender that his actions were highly objectionable, and it was suggested that if he failed to respect such hints, her only recourse was to leave her seat and report the annoyance to the management. She might then be shown to another seat, or steps might be taken to remove the offender from the house.

M. H.

• • • •

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Please tell "Annoyed" the following: It may not be a "genteel" way of dealing with the situation, but it's effective. I know, because I've tried it. Like "Annoyed," I first tried shrinking away into the side of the seat farthest from the lounging man, who thereupon lounged the more.

Then I gave him a good jab with my elbow and said sharply, "Stay in your own seat." And so he did, after that. There was no disturbance and no publicity. If anyone overheard, nothing was said.

JABBER.

• • • •

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Some time ago there was a letter in your column discussing the stranger who makes himself obnoxious in public places. I have often wondered what right anyone has, really, to invade the quiet with which one's neighbor is entitled by making unnecessary noises, by filling the immediate atmosphere with smoke, or by rudely jostling against him.

• • • •

Your recommendations on how to meet this annoying problem happen to be the same that I would advocate under such circumstances. But under certain other circumstances the course adopted by an acquaintance of mine might be worth considering.

• • • •

This acquaintance, a woman, was once traveling by train when an elderly flirt persisted in occupying that part of the seat to which she was entitled. She continued her reading but quietly raised her foot and suddenly gave him a sharp kick in the calf of the leg. She then covered the unconventional incident with a polite, "I beg your pardon," and continued her reading—in peace.

Lady Astor Decries Idea Mother Is Best Mentor for Child

THE MOTHER of five children, Lady Astor frankly admits her family wouldn't have been so large if she had once known what she knows now.

She made this confession recently when lecturing on birth control to an assembly of teachers in Lincoln, England. She mentioned that one of her sons told her the other day that she did not take enough interest in him before he was 7 years old.

"My reply was, "Lady Astor said, "If I had known as much as I do now I should not have had you at all."

In the course of her talk, Lady Astor also decried the theory that a mother is the best person to bring up a child. She said: "Take a child from a nursery school and a child from its dear, protecting mother's side and you will find the child from the school has all the things that the mother longed to give her child and could not."

Lydia Pinkham's Daughter in Capital; Recalls Entry Into Field of Business

Mrs. Gove, Treasurer of Concern Incorporated in 1881, and Her Daughter, Discuss Mother's Pioneer Activities.

QUIETLY AND SERENELY, a little white haired lady sat on the bright chintz covered sofa in the crowded Mayflower Hotel lobby. Dozens of people hurried past. Some of them, casting their eyes in her direction might have noticed her peaceful smile. Others might have seen the diamonds that glistened on her fingers.

Even had they known her name they would have passed her by with a casual glance at best. For who was there to guess that Mrs. Aroline C. Gove was the daughter of Lydia E. Pinkham of vegetable compound fame? Or to guess that the woman seated beside her with her face almost hidden under a wide brimmed white hat was Lydia E. Pinkham's grandaughter?

They were gracious and quite willing to turn back the calendar to the times of Lydia E. Pinkham herself.

Mrs. Gove, who has been treasurer of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medical Co. for 60 years, says she remembers very well when her mother started making the compound.

"Mother never expected to commercialize it," Mrs. Gove said. "She simply used to make up a quantity of it on the kitchen stove and give it to the neighbors. But my father's business reached such a state something had to be done.

"Mother, who was a pioneer type anyway, started advertising it. She wanted to attract attention—or rather she had to, so she did an unprecedented thing. She advertised, using her picture.

"That was in 1871. By 1881 the business was incorporated, and I was made treasurer, and I've been treasurer ever since."

Miss Lydia Gove, who sat quietly by while her mother recalled the past, now leaned forward. I'm assistant treasurer," she said. Grandmother, as mother said, was quite a pioneer. An outstanding woman for her times, too. She was a strong abolitionist, attended meetings, with no fear of the mob scenes which so frequently occurred, and while she did no stumping for women's rights, she did take to this field."

What TODAY Means

"Leo."

IF JULY 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until 12 noon, from 1 to 3 p. m., and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 10 p. m. until midnight.

If July 24 is your birthday, this day may be filled with pleasant surprises. Any earnest effort made to accomplish a definite end has an excellent chance to succeed. It will be a decided mistake to permit anything to cause you to lose your temper, as self-control is likely to prove to be the most important factor in the regulation of this day's social and business affairs. Trading instinets will probably be strong, so there should be much activity in commercial lines. A little praise, judiciously used, will be very helpful both in the home and office.

Be careful of your speech and intonation. It may not be what is said, but how it is expressed, that will count. Be very cautious about giving or accepting suggestions on this date, especially if money is involved. Married and engaged couples, and those who are in love, will be wise to remember loyalty is the foundation on which happy marriages depend.

If a woman, and July 24 is your birthday, you can have a remarkable influence over those with whom you come into close contact. You have a magnetic personality and recognized strength of character. Be careful you use your gifts advantageously. You should have some definite interest in life outside of social activities. Do not be concerned over the dim, distant future, as any worries you may have concerning it may prove to be only imagination.

When in doubt, it might be good judgment for you to seek advice. If an opportunity is presented to you, be careful that it is not lost through procrastination. You are probably artistic and capable of developing some decided talent in a highly profitable manner. Painting, newspaper work, teaching, singing, music or selling offer opportunities that you can not afford to ignore. Your matrimonial life should be happy.

The child born on July 24 generally, when it graduates from high school, needs careful guidance, especially in deciding upon the preparatory work for its future career.

If a man, and July 24 is your natal day, it will probably be through the skillful use of your hands or mental activity that you will win through to the goal of your hopes. Botany, lecturing, acting, writing, inventing or politics may be largely instrumental in your winning public recognition.

Columbia U. Plans Course for Parents

It Includes Revival of Lost Art of Conversation.

A PLAN to educate parents as well as children is now being launched by the summer demonstration school of Columbia University, according to Martin P. Chworowsky, of the University of Pittsburgh, who is in charge of the work.

Working toward "the rebuilding of American home life," the plan includes a revival of the lost art of conversation, improved radio and motion pictures and a more expansive and inclusive community life.

In the demonstration school parents have the opportunity to watch their children's reactions in the classroom. In the nursery school, kindergarten and the first six grades, parents attend school with their children and meet with the teachers to learn modern methods.

"The entire group is concerned with child psychology, the overdependence of the child on his family and recreation after school," Mr. Chworowsky said. "It is important, too, that both the home and the school use the same echnique."

Efficiency Cut by Heavy Lunches

Meal of Milk, Crackers, Cereals and Fruits Recommended.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY observers have noted the mental sluggishness, even drowsiness, that overcomes certain persons in the period immediately following lunch and during the last hour of the working day, and school teachers have recognized that they must make a greater effort to interest their pupils during these hours.

Recent experiments conducted by Prof. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate University, have thrown considerable light on the situation. In his study he used healthy young adults, all of whom were accustomed to considerable mental activity. Meals were controlled in the laboratory and heavy as well as light menus were planned and given at different periods.

These human guinea pigs were first shown bits of cardboard on which legibly written house addresses were displayed. Each card remained visible for 10 seconds. A further 10-second interval intervened before another name and address appeared. This was repeated until 10 names and addresses had been shown. Memory was then tested 30 minutes after the showing of the last card. Following a heavy noon meal, slightly less than 50 per cent of the addresses were correctly recalled, while on the light meal days a trifle more than 60 per cent were remembered.

Arithmetical problems were then proposed in which the subject would add to a given number a two-figure number until 100 additions had been made. It required 18.3 more seconds to make the additions on heavy meal days than upon those in which a light noon lunch had been eaten. The light meal group made 25 per cent fewer errors.

Other experiments involved the association of ideas. The director of the test would call out the name of an object and the student would respond by naming any part of the object that came to mind. For example, if the word "wheel" were announced the subject would respond with "spoke," "rim," "tire," etc. The response time was measured in thousandths of a second. Each subject was tested on two different days and twenty responses were measured each day. Results showed that the heavy meal subjects were nearly 7 per cent slower.

Attention was also measured by determining the stimulus required to secure mental concentration. Hearing was used as the key sense, and a sound mechanism with suitable electrical connections was employed. The subject's attention was focused upon the intensity of the sound, which was interrupted four times in five minutes without his knowledge. Lapses of attention or lack of concentration were 89 per cent fewer on the light meal days. In other words, attention would wander more than twice as often after the heavy meal periods.

Fatigue was measured by having the subject record their own feelings in accordance with an accepted list of manifestations of that "tired feeling," and 29 per cent fewer sensations of fatigue were found to be present on the light meal days.

The conclusions of Laird and his coworkers are that we can account for much of our loss of efficiency during the afternoon work period on the basis of the heavy noon meal. They recommend light dairy lunches, consisting of milk, crackers, corn flakes, gelatin, and fresh fruits.

Of course, Laird's subjects were under control conditions as to rest, sleep, exercise, etc. No small amount of afternoon lethargy may be ascribed to late hours the night before or to a clogged digestive tract. At any rate, it is far more hygienic to consume leisurely a reasonably substantial breakfast and ease up on the calories at noontime. "Ye goode olde custom"—tea at 4 o'clock—supplies caffeine and raises mental alertness.

Further Gain In U. S. Divorce Rate Forecast

Sociology Professor Blames Situation on Economic Readjustment.

By Peter Kihss,
A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 23.—There are more divorces every year. For every 100 marriages today there are 17 or 18 divorces throughout the United States. That compares with only 10 such divorces 20 years ago, and but 6 back in 1895.

A chunky Canadian-born professor of sociology, Dr. Lyford P. Edwards, himself a married man of a middle-aged suburban set, looked at that situation today. He estimated that that number might even double within the next few years, certainly that it would increase far above what it is now. And he said: "I'm heartily in favor of it. Don't fall for this idea that the family is breaking up. Actually the family is just working out a reconstruction."

Prof. Edwards, lecturing at Columbia University, holds that economic readjustments are high among the things accelerating the divorce rate.

Economic Disputes Arise.

Up to a few years ago, he explains, it was the usual and accepted thing for a husband to be the head of the family. He was the bread-winner, and he also gave all the orders on how the family money should be spent.

Now woman is gaining economic independence and the situation is changing, Dr. Edwards goes on. She insists on more economic freedom within the family. She often insists on holding a job, contributing a money income to the family support.

Then dispute after dispute arises within the family, first as a result of differences over whether the wife should work, later over how the family income should be spent. And with such differences is the road to divorce paved.

"What we are working toward," Dr. Edwards remarked, "is a partnership scheme in marriage. We are getting to the place where woman will be on as independent a basis as man.

"It may take two or three generations to work out, and meanwhile the divorce rate is likely to rise considerably higher than it is now.

Adjustment Being Made.

"But that is a hopeful sign, not a disturbing one. We are making the adjustment. And then, just as sure as that adjustment is made, the rate will go down again, will become as small as it ever was before."

Dr. Edwards, of course, does not hold that economics is the sole determinant for divorce. He cites at least two other major causes. One he says is the disappointment of finding that the husband or wife actually isn't perfect, a discovery which helps explain why the greatest number of divorces comes among those married only three, four, or five years.

"Ignorance of sex relations" he notes as another important factor in the break-up of marriages, present social customs preventing intelligent discussion and instruction before marriage."

But these views and forecasts do not fill Prof. Edwards with alarm. He looks back over the lore gathered by sociology. And when he set his new straw hat upon his head as he prepared to leave his office on Morningside Heights this morning he reassured his interviewer.

"The family will go on," he said. "Of course. It is a spontaneous and permanent social grouping, and while it may change in form, it can not die."

Spineless Men Held to Blame For Hysteria

WHAT makes women hysterical? "Henpecked husbands," says Dr. Glehm, of the Zepernick Sanatorium in Germany. Dr. Glehm has been observing the husbands of 30 women in his sanatorium for "nerve afflictions," and has concluded that "as a rule, only women who have their husbands under their thumb are hysterical."

Of the 30 husbands whose wives were in the sanatorium, only 8 were normal. Three had suffered long and severe illness and 2 were "robust and reckless."

The remaining 17 were men of weak and unbalanced characters. Ten of these were "obviously henpecked," four were suffering from neurasthenia and three were inveterate drunkards. But while all the cases of hysteria were serious the wives of the henpecked husbands were the most violent, according to Dr. Glehm—hence his conclusion that the henpecked husband is as much to blame when his wife becomes hysterical as the wifely tyrant herself.

Road Moneys Are Allotted By Virginia

More Than $13,500,000 to Be Spent in State, Federal Funds.

Grade-Crossing Projects Included in Allocations Made Public.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—Virginia's State Highway Department today announced allocation of more than $13,500,000 in Federal and State funds for road building and grade-crossing elimination.

The department will incur a deficit of $1,500,000 for the fiscal year ending next June 30, Commissioner H. G. Shirley said, because of the requirement that it match $2,400,000 in regular Federal-aid appropriations dollar for dolar.

Gov. Peery consented some time ago for the highway department to unbalance its accounts to this extent in order to procure the Federal allotment.

This grant, which will be applied exclusively to trunk highways, will assist materially in establishing an adequate system of hard-surface main highways in Virginia, Shirley said.

Helped By Railroads.

Allotment of the $13,500,000 fund, one of the largest to be expended in the department's history, was completed much sooner than was anticipated. Railroad representatives who conferred here yesterday with department officials on grade-crossing projects wired essential information which enabled him to announce the allocations today, the commissioner said.

The large total includes $3,700,000 of Federal funds for crossing elimination; $3,600,000 of Federal work relief funds for road construction; $2,400,000 of Federal-aid appropriations; $2,400,000 of State funds to match the latter sum, and $1,500,000 of State money to pay the cost of convict labor used by the department.

Remainder for Maintenance.

The allocations, worked out for the most part when the entire commission was in session several days last week, round out a comprehensive program for the fiscal year, Mr. Shirley said. The remainder of the State's revenues for road purposes, amounting to some $7,000,000, will be spent for maintenance.

The money apportioned by the plan announced today will be spent on a large number of relatively small projects in every construction district in the State, with some money allocated to be spent in every city and county. Shirely said this plan was adopted in order to spread work among more than 5,000 relief recipients who are to be given a year's work on road projects.

Allocations were made for primary and secondary road projects and for grade crossing eliminations in all districts.

Public Hearings.

The program will be subject to review at public hearings announced as follows: Salem and Bristol districts, Pulaski, July 30; Staunton and Lynchburg districts, Lexington, July 31; Fredericksburg and Culpeper districts, Fredericksburg, August 1; Richmond and Suffolk districts, Richmond, August 2.

The $1,500,000 deficit entailed by matching of Federal aid funds will be in addition to an approximate $500,000 deficit with which the department ended the fiscal year the past June 30. The later deficiency, however, was much less than had been anticipated, the commissioner pointed out. He intimated that the handicap was not a cause of much concern, saying it could be absorbed later without great difficulty.

Up to the present time, Shirley calculated, Virginia has spent some $135,000,000 on the highway system since it was mapped in 1918, and he estimates than approximately $140,000,000 more, in addition to the present allocations, will be required to complete the long-range program as planned. He set no time limit for its completion, however.

Lee Memorial Boulevard.

Allocations include $150,000 for the Lee Memorial boulevard, an amount which Shirley said would pave the incompleted 2-mile link between the Arlington Memorial Bridge and a point just west of Fort Myer.

Rights of way must be secured before construction is begun, Shirley said, but an arrangement has been made by which Arlington County and the State of Virginia will share the costs. He said he expected this detail to be worked out soon.

Phone Company Votes To End Augusta Service

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., July 23. — One hundred and six telephone holders of the Augusta County Farmers' Mutual Telephone Co. may be without service after Wednesday.

Because of "increasing indebtedness and decreasing number of subscribers," stockholders of the company, at a meeting here yesterday, voted to close the switchboard and dispose of some properties of the company. When the concern was mormed about 15 years ago there were 380 subscribers. The indebtedness has grown to $5,800.

People's Court Is Under Fire At Salisbury

Taxpayer Also Questions Naming of Humphreys as Judge.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., July 23.—The State has until August 12 to file an answer to a petition contending that the 1927 law setting up the people's court here is unconstitutional.

The petition, filed today, also questions the legality of the appointment of Marion A. Humphreys as judge of the court. Humphreys was named by Gov. Nice to succeed the late Judge David Dallas.

The petition declares Humphreys is not a resident or voter in either of the three election districts served by the people's court. It asks a writ of mandamus declaring the office vacant.

Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson, of the First Judicial Circuit, signed an order giving Humphreys until August 12 to show cause why the writ should not be granted. In such cases, the State attorney general is counsel for the defendant.

The petition was filed by Lewis C. Merryman, attorney, on behalf of Albert M. Walls, a "citizen and a voter and taxpayer" of Wicomico County.

The people's court has jurisdiction for the three election districts lying wholly or in part in the city of Salisbury.

FERA Investigates Shirking Charges

Allegany Survey Seeks Extent of Job Refusals.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—A survey of Alleghany County to determine to what extent persons on relief rolls there are refusing work when it is offered them is being made by investigators from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Washington.

The survey is one of three being conducted in the East to test the truth of charges that unemployed persons have turned down offers of jobs in private industry in order that they might continue to receive relief. Other surveys are being conducted at Memphis, Tenn., and Buffalo, N. Y.

William A. Smith, VERA-WPA chief for Virginia, today said he was asked by FERA officials to name six sections of Virginia where such a survey might be conducted, and that Alleghany was chosen.

Relief Agency Buys 134 Cars Of Potatoes

Purrchase at $1.25 to Help Raise Growers' Prices on Eastern Shore.

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., July 23.—One hundred and thirty-four carloads of Eastern Shore potatoes were purchased today by the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, which will ship them to New York presumably for distribution by relief agencies, the producers' governing committee announced.

Today's purchase brought to 379 the number of cars bought by Government relief officials, through the agency of the VERA, with a $350,000 appropriation made to aid the growers in their campaign for better prices.

The sale was made at $1.25, the quotation accepted by the growers' council after a drastic embargo had driven the price as high as $2.10 a barrel. The reduction was made largely because of mounting demurrage charges on potatoes held in freight cars by slow demand.

This handicap will be overcome, farm leaders said today, by loading only enough tubers to fill dealers' orders for each day.

Expressing anxiety over the fate of the Warren bill, measure designed to vest control of the potato crop in the AAA, the farmers today were inclined to make their "guild" organization permanent if the bill did not become effective by next season. The Warren bill was approved yesterday by the Senate, but the House has not acted.

Ex-Chief of Police Found Shot Dead

Marylander Kills Self at Home of Mother.

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., July 23.—John T. Allen, former chief of police, was found dead today, a bullet wound in his head, at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Allen.

Acting Coroner J. Van Cherie gave a verdict of suicide, but said an inquest would be held. No date was set for it. A pistol was found near the body, which was discovered by Allen's mother. Allen was chief of police a number of years, retiring May, 1934.

His wife died two years ago and he was said to have been despondent.

Woman Postmaster, 78, Claims National Record for Service

By the Associated Press.

Oxford, Md., July 23.—Miss Mollie W. Stewart at 78 has been postmaster for 58 years—longer than any other man or woman in the country—but even that is not the full extent of her experience handling Oxford's mail.

From the time she was able to read and reach the crude letter boxes placed on a counter in a small store she has worked in the post-office. She began her career of sorting letters and distributing mail while her father, James Stewart, was postmaster.

Her father had been postmaster as long as she can remember. He died in 1877, and his daughter—then 20—took over the job. In the 58 years since then she has received appointments from 13 Presidents.

Although no one has been able to oust her, all has not been smooth sailing for the lady postmaster. Going efficiently about her duty of "putting up" the mail, she recalled that her last appointment came only after "a bitter struggle."

"But friends both here and as far as California," she recalled, "wrote me letters urging me to fight. I won out after bankers, business men and church people united in a mammoth petition to Washington asking for my reappointment."

Although having already outstripped all competitors in length of service, Miss Stewart looks forward to many years of work.

"I ought to be good for at least 10, maybe 15 years more," she said with a smile.

Girl Admits She Slew Dad With a Shoe

Absolves Mother in Norton Slaying; Unemotional at Bier.

By the Associated Press.

Norton, Va., July 23.—Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old school teacher, told Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear, he said today, that she beat her father, Trigg Maxwell, to death with a heavy shoe in their home at Pound early Sunday morning.

As quoted by Greear, the girl confessed attacking her father when he berated her for staying out late and threatened to whip her. Both the girl and her mother are under indictment for murder but she insisted in her confession to Greear that the older woman had nothing to do with the affair.

Trial of the two women has been set for August 20.

Miss Maxwell showed no emotion when taken to view the body of her father this afternoon, but when her mother and a sister became hysterical she was returned to the jail at Wise by Sheriff J. P. Adams.

The body was at the home of Maxwell's son-in-law, H. C. Robinson, where the funeral was scheduled to be held this afternoon. Services were postponed, however, because of a heavy rain and the failure of Earl Maxwell, a son, to arrive from New York. Services were deferred until tomorrow.

A large crowd, including many notables of Wise and Dickenson County, gathered this afternoon before the funeral was postponed.

Beetle Zone Viewed By Farm Leaders

Maryland Leaders Tour Area Infested by Pest.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 23.—Agricultural leaders of Maryland toured Cecil County and southern New Jersey today to see the hordes of Japanese beetles which are swarming over crops and other foliage of the Eastern Shore.

The infestation has been described by officials of the University of Maryland extension service as the worst this State ever has experienced. Plans are being considered to combat them.

The group inspected several Cecil County orchards this morning and then crossed into New Jersey, where they were met by officials of that State and taken for a tour of orchards and asparagus beds.

Included among those making the tour were Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the extension service; Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the university experiment station; Dr. E. N. Cory, State entomologist; Dr. George S. Langford, assistant State entomologist; C. E. Wise, secretary of the Maryland farm bureau, and the following county agents, A. C. McBean, Kent; L. C. Burns, Carroll; Kenneth W. Baker, Queen Annes; E. W. Clendaniel, Caroline, and J. C. Miller, Cecil.

Farmers from those counties and from Baltimore, Harford and Howard counties also attended.

Model Part Of New Road Is Proposed

Constructing Stretch of Baltimore-to-Capital Parkway Urged.

Portion Would Serve to Show Advantages of Development.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 23.—Construction of a short stretch of the proposed park-highway between Baltimore and Washington, to serve as a model and show the advantages of such a road, was proposed today at a meeting of the State planning commission and representatives of other Government groups interested in the project.

The meeting, called by Abel Wolman, chairman of the planning commission, was to have considered all phases of the development of the area between the two cities. However, the discussion was almost entirely confined to the proposed new highway. Annapolis, Wolman said, will be in the area whose development will be planned, but it was not involved in the road discussion.

Gilmor Clarke, detailed to the development planning work by the National Resources Committee, said the area should be a model for the whole country. He said the parkway-road, for pleasure traffic, should be built first. Its borders should be controlled to forbid the erection of unattractive filling stations, refreshments stands and similar structures, he stated.

Would Use U. S. Land.

F. W. Besley, State forester, pointed out that the State already owned, for forest purposes, about 50 per cent of the land which would be traversed by the new road if it went by way of Fort Meade. Another suggestion was that the first model stretch be built through the Federal land at Beltsville. This later could be made part of the full stretch.

A heavy-duty road, for truck traffic through the area, would be the second consideration in its development, Clarke declared. He said he thought it would be cheaper to buy a new right-of-way and build a new road than to try to widen the present highway.

The State roads commission realizes that its present road system is inadequate, Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the body, said. He pointed to the need for a Washington road to compare with similar, heavily-traveled roads elsewhere. He also said that U. S. Route 40 needs improvement so that the people from Hagerstown may come to Baltimore more easily than they can go to Philadelphia, and that a route must be provided so Eastern Shore residents can come to Baltimore without having to go through Delaware.

Suggests Map.

Irving I. Root, of the Maryland-National Capitol Park and Planning Commission, said that before any land is bought for the road, a map should be made showing what land will be needed. Otherwise, he pointed out, the land may be bought for road purposes and then found to be needed for the Bladensburg flood control work. Wolman revealed that the planning commission already has listed the mapping of the area as Project No. 1 for the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Wolman appointed a committee to plan for cooperation between the various groups.

Maj. J. W. Shirley of the Baltimore planning commission was named chairman. Other members are Smith, Besley, Root, Robert B. Morse of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission; Philip Perelman, of Baltimore, and John Nolen, of the National Capitol Park and Planning Commission. Thomas F. Hubbard of the National Resources committee, will serve as executive secretary.

Others included Dr. Joseph I. France and Miss Lavinia Engle of the State Planning Commission; Dr. J. F. Kendrick, representing the State department of health; Hale Walker and Theodore Straus of the National Resources committee; Francis H. Dryden of the Maryland emergency relief administration, and Bernard L. Crozier, chief engineer of the city of Baltimore.

Boy Who Begged Shot in Back As He Flees From Jail's Door

Virginia Lad Dying With Bullet Through Lung at Frederick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Brunswick, Md., July 23.—A 17-year-old Virginia boy lay dying tonight in a Frederick hospital because he begged for food.

The victim, Fred C. Hyett, of Stewart, Va., was shot in the back as he fled from officers who were about to place him in jail. The bullet, fired by Joseph E. Chew, a veteran of 18 years' police service, passed through a lung, felling the youth in the street.

Young Hyett applied for lodging at the transient bureau here last night and was given a bed.

This morning, when Hyett asked for breakfast, he was told that he first must visit a doctor to determine the cause of abrasions on his face. This the youth refused to do and left the bureau.

After Hyett has asked several housewives for food police were called and he was taken to jail, breaking away from the officers as the door was being unlocked.

Chew said he fired one shot to halt the youth. He explained that he had not deliberately aimed at Hyett and had only meant to frighten him. Chew was released on $1,000 bond.

Officials telephoned young Hyett's parents in Stewart, but were informed that they did not have the money with which to go to Frederick to see their dying son.

Pony Penning Day Set for Tomorrow

Accomac, Va., July 23 (AP).—Horsemanship and boating skill will feature the day's program of the annual Chincoteague Island pony penning day Thursday.

At 6 a. m. ponies will be rounded up and driven into pens in the center of town, where they will be sold and branded or freed until the roundup next year.

Races beginning at 10 a. m. will be followed at 11 by a miniature rodeo of exhibition riding and bronco-busting.

In the afternoon a water event will include the United States Coast Guardsmen in the district as entrants. At 1:30 p. m. crews from the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth districts will wage a boat race over a mile distance.

Court Rulings Halt a Million In AAA Taxes

Processing Levy 'Frozen' in Virginia by Legal Injunctions.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—More than $1,000,000 in processing taxes is "frozen" by court orders issued recently in Virginia restraining N. B. Early, sr., collector of internal revenue, from collecting the AAA levies.

Nine orders entered by Judge Luther B. Way in the Eastern District Federal Court in favor of peanut companies of the Tidewater region involve a total of $1,145,738, a checkup revealed today.

Judge Way also granted an order in favor of the Rapidan Milling Co., which was subject to the processing tax on wheat and corn, halting collection of $32,200 due the Government.

Judge John Paul yesterday in Western District Court at Harrisonburg heeded the plea of 12 millers for injunctions, though he declined to rule on the point of constitutionality of the levy. An aggregate of $52,532 was held up by this action, of which $27,285 was due by the Roanoke City Mills of Roanoke, and the remainder by 11 Shenandoah Valley mills.

Welfare Board Set Up For Washington County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23.—Washington County's new board of welfare was completed today, it was announced after a meeting of the board of county commissioners. The members are John Ankeney, representing the county commissioners; E. C. Lease, jr., and Harry K. Newcomer, Beacer Creek; David K. Cushwa, sr., Williamsport; Edgar C. Jones and Mrs. Frank L. Bentz, Boonesboro.

The board is expected to organize soon. All claims for old-age pensions must be approved by the board before payment. Several hundred claims are on record.

Life-Saving School Ends.

Miss Maggie Honey Taught in Fredericksburg Most of Time.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 23.—Miss Maggie Honey, veteran teacher in the Fredericksburg public schools, has retired. She resigned from the faculty after having been redesignated by the school board.

Miss Honey, one of Virginia's oldest school teachers in length of service, called her retirement the "greatest decision I ever had to make." Records of the school board show she had been a teacher for 49 years, 46 of which were spent in the Fredericksburg elementary school.

Speaking with affection for the hundreds of pupils she has taught and their parents she said she resigned because of duties which required her presence at home.

She taught many who now hold important places in the city government as well as outside of Fredericksburg.

16 New Cases Of Paralysis Are Reported

Number Ill in Virginia Increases to 207 Since June 1.

Children Are Asked to Stay Away From All Meetings.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 23.—Virginia's total of infantile paralysis cases recorded since June 1 shot up to 207 today as 16 new patients were reported to the State health department.

The cases registered today were one each from Albemarle, Bedford, Brunswick, Buckingham, Fairfax, Fauquier, Goochland, Halifax, Nelson, Pittsylvania and Tazewell counties and Roanoke City, and two each from Mechlenburg and Orange counties.

Bedford, Fairfax and Orange counties had not previously reported cases.

General compliance with instructions from the health department against children congregating seemed to be the rule throughout the State.

As a precautionary measure, Dr. G. B. Arnold, superintendent of the State Colony of the Epileptic and Feeble Minded, announced at Lyncnburg no additional patients would be admitted for the present. Of the more than 1,100 patients, some 300 or 400 are children.

Theaters at Waynesboro stated yesterday they would not sell tickets to children for the present, and the Park Association at Winchester closed all playgrounds.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., July 23.—Another case of infantile paralysis was discovered here yesterday afternoon, bringing the total number of definite cases in the city and county to 13.

Dr. C. H. Eller, joint health officer for Albemarle and Charlottesville, stated that although the number of cases was abnormal, most of them were very mild.

There is one case at the university where a 22-year-old student contracted the disease.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., July 23.—The health authorities of Clarke County are taking every precaution to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis. All Sunday schools have been closed; children under 16 prohibited from attending shows, all public swimming pools have been drained and parents have been warned to keep their children off the streets and confine them to their own yards.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., July 23.—The Manassas firemen's carnival, among many other places of entertainment for the children of Prince William County, has been postponed indefinitely because of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Children are banned from the theater, traveling shows have not been allowed to enter the district, Sunday school classes for children are closed, all meetings which include children and the swimming classes for children have been postponed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, July 23.—Notwithstanding action of the Winchester Ministerial Association last week in adopting resolutions to the effect that so long as other agencies are permitted to operate unrestricted it would do little good to close the Sunday schools, officials of two Sunday schools have announced services will be cancelled temporarily for persons under 16 years of age.

The step is a precaution against possible spread of infantile paralysis. The Baptist and Lutheran Sunday schools were the first to announce their intention of co-operating with health authorities. No cases have been reported here.

Bankers Said to Be Casting Covetous Eyes at Film Industry Gone Prosperous!

Four Major Units Is Aim; Shirley Is an Artist; Amusement Notes.

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Since both Fox Films and Twentieth Century Pictures had announced their individual product for the 1935-36 season before their recent merger was accomplished, each company's productions, so made and advertised, will be disposed of to exhibitors as if placed on the market by two separate and distinct corporations.

When the final setup and executive personnel have been definitely consumated and assigned to permanent duties, respectively, the joint output of the amalgamated organizations will be known by the trademark name of Twentieth Century-Fox.

These decisions were announced from Hollywood yesterday in a statement that presages a considerable shakeup in the productional topography of the motion picture industry.

The fine Italian hand of the bankers—and I do not mean necessarily the Gianninis—may be dimly discerned in the background of the new movement looking to a closer consolidation of major producing units. At least, such is the rumor wafting its way East from the farther slope of the Sierras.

Prosperity Makes Difference.

During the protracted period of the depression, when the strongest of the picture-producing companies were keeping their books exclusively in red ink, the bankers were not interested. Recently, however, with an improved quality of screen entertainment, longer runs, higher rentals and the general flavor of prosperity hovering over the industry, the gentlemen with their fingers on the strings of the money bags are once more beginning to sit up and take notice. Not especially wishing to mix a metaphor, with one taste of blood their hunger for the whole carcass has been aroused.

The consolidation of the Fox interests and those fostered by Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck under the trade name of Twentieth Century, according to reliable report, only reflects, through President Sidney R. Kent of Fox, one of their strong allies, the mood of the Chase money interests.

The quick resignation from Fox of Winfield Sheehan, who has been in the saddle, insofar as production is concerned, ever since William Fox a few years ago was frozen out of the business he created, is interpreted by those reputedly "in the know" to mean his quick affiliation with some other big producer or possibly the beginning of another consolidation of interests at present operating independently.

Winnie Usually Battles.

Mr. Sheehan does not usually step down and out without putting up a fight unless there is a reason.

His contract with Fox, having many months still to run, was bought up for the tidy sum of $360,000, according to West Coast grapevine. There are those who believe, in view of all the circumstances, that Mr. Sheehan is headed for an alliance with Paramount, of which President Kent of Fox was formerly general sales manager.

Numerous similar straws bobbing about in the miniature typhoon of rumors that have sprung up since Fox and Twentieth Century got together, lend color to the insistent contention that the bankers have it in mind to reduce the entire production and distribution set-up of the picture industry to not more than four units, all of which they will control.

Government Will Watch.

This, of course, will be a slow and gradual process, carried forward a little at a time, under the presumably watchful eye of the Federal Securities Commission. Once accomplished, the motion-picture industry will have been resolved, it might be better said, into one of the closest little corporations in the history of big business.

The degree to which overhead could be hammered down and profits pushed up under such an arrangement is said to be well-nigh incalculable.

At any rate, the present flurry is indicative of the fact that the "movies" still move and preserve the salient characteristic of an amusement "game" that is ever in flux.

There were those who had begun to fear that the racket had gone static and was dying on its feet—or maybe sitting down, or even lying flat on its back!

There are several amusing sidelights on that Showboat Cruise of the Variety Club aboard the Wilson Line Steamer City of Washington last Saturday midnight.

For instance, one local drama editor who is notorious for his belief that nothing ever starts on time and that former Mayor Jimmy Walker had the right idea in arriving at every appointment from 15 minutes to 5 hours late, ambled leisurely down to the wharf to discover to his great chagrin that the midnight cruise had really begun at midnight and he had missed the boat by considerably more than leaping or even swimming distance.

Then there were the musicians of the local union. Unknown to the general public, it looked very much, up until Saturday morning, as if the American Federation of Musicians' cast-iron rules would prevent both Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears and Jolly Coburn and His Rainbow Room Orchestra, from Radio City, from presenting themselves aboard the boat, as advertised, despite signed contracts, because of some silly regulation about 'doubling." A special dispensation from President Weber, in New York, Saturday morning extended permission to the stage bands to play for the cruise, however, provided two local "stand-by" bands also were paid for an equivalent number of instrumentalists and length of time.

Ordinarily, this would mean that two extra bands would be paid for, but not used. But the general arrangements committee of the Variety Club put over a fast one by demanding the presence of the two extra bands aboard ship to play for the money they were to receive. So there were four bands on the cruise instead of only the two that were advertised, the pit bands from Loew's Fox and the Warner Brothers Earle theaters being the surprised young men who were ordered to be on hand just when they thought they would take that extra dough and go fishing!

Dr. Kindler also is laughing!

Starring Mr. Kaldenbach.

Speaking of cruises on the Potomac, the new hardwood dance floor aboard the streamliner Potomac is engaging the attention of dancers, along with Bernie Jarboe's Night Hawks, the boat's popular dance band. The Jarboe orchestra recently has been featuring the different members of the organization as soloists. The featured soloist this week is Ray Kaldenbach, pianist, whose specialties are being presented nightly.

The streamliner Potomac, incidentally, is making moonlight dance trips down the river nightly, leaving the pier at 8:45 p. m. and returning at 11:45.

On Wednesday and Saturday of each week the Potomac makes a daylight excursion run to Chapel Point, leaving at 9 a. m. and returning at 7:45 p. m. On Saturday and Sunday the craft carries week-end outing parties to Colonial Beach, leaving at 9 a. m. and returning at 7:45 p. m. Deck chairs on the spacious dining salon and hurricane decks provide comfortable accommodation for 1,500 passengers. Tonight the moonlight trip will be made by Our Lady of Victory, one of the numerous organizations that have articled for chartered rides this week.

Reverting very briefly to the matter of motion picture theater prosperity, the case of the Roxy Theater, in New York, may be taken as an example of what is typical of the theater's present booming state. According to a report just filed by Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy, with Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey in New York, the house showed a net operating profit of $130,519.23 for the operating year ended June 13. In the similar preceding period the Roxy suffered a loss of $59,341.59. And the Roxy does not run all of the best pictures on Broadway, at that! That is part of that "one taste of blood" the bankers have had.

A Temple of Greatness.

It is amazing with what speed Shirley Temple, the biggest little actress of them all, is growing in artistic stature.

Physically, she seems not very much different from the tiny tot that staggered an international public by the extraordinary precocity of her performances in such screen hits as "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Little Miss Marker." In the finesse and constantly expanding versatility she reveals in her latest picture, on the other hand, she seems quite another little artiste.

This was emphasized in the minds—if any—of the drama desks who viewed "Curly Top" in the private projection room of the Fox film exchange yesterday afternoon, slightly before the newly installed cooling system began to function!

Others of the critical fraternity's great intelligences had been similarly impressed on Saturday morning, when the Loew executives also unspooled the film in the thought that it was the last opportunity they would have.

Lucky Break—Unlucky Yarn.

My sleeping sickness being what it is on Saturdays, that was a lucky break for this colyum, that digging up another print yesterday.

That the story contrived for "Curly Top," by Patterson McNutt and Arthur Beckhard, creaks slightly, from time to time, and is pretty seriously bogged down with some of the oldest hokum known to show business, is wholly unimportant compared with the remarkable performance turned in by the chubby little star.

Not only does she sing two exacting songs, introduce several tap dances and altogether comport herself like a veteran trouper, but in one number at the charity garden party which she promotes Shirley executes a number that runs the gamut from babyhood to old age. Her white-haired old lady is not so much worse than Colleen Moore's lamented "So Big," at that!

Proves Her Artistry.

Perhaps the surest proof of diminutive Miss Temple's genius for winning and holding audiences is that she is able to triumph so gloriously and so easily over the mediocrity of material so hoary as to handicap her once, to cite a single instance, with the ancient comedy device of attempting to make lemonade in the finger-bowl at the first dinner served in the wealthy home into which she has been adopted as the incorrigible of the orphanage. Any player who can take the curse off that one is an artiste. So Shirley Temple is an artiste.

But the most surprising aspect of the child's work is its poise, surety and tremendous change of mood and pace. Shirley is at her best by far in "Curly Top."

It is regrettable that "Curly Top" is not as good as she is.

There are redeeming qualities, even so. Rochelle Hudson makes her debut, as far as these ears are concerned, as a balladist of charm, and voice at least a few grades better than Janet Gaynor's; John Boles sings several times and there are a pony, a duck, a butler and a chef that you will love. (Opening at the Palace on Friday, I believe.)

With the chorus rehearsals well under way, the cast of principals virtually completed and scenery and costumes coming along, Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox Theater, in charge of the production, are turning attention now to writers capable of turning out sketches, skits and blackouts for the third, annual, all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be presented at the Fox next month.

Among the prospective authors of specialties for the revue, already curled over their joke books and typewriters, are Jack Sullivan, 419 Tenth street northeast; George J. Miller, 323 Seventeenth place northeast; Edy Chaput, 916 Seventeenth street northwest; L. E. Scott, 602 East Capitol street, and Frank B. Cook, District National Bank Building.

From the synopssi turned in by these writers, Mr. Barron and Mr. Ford are sure they will have some knockout numbers. Mr. Ford, by the way, has written the words and music for four songs for the revue. They are, "Tangled Traffic," "Broken Butterfly," "Rhythm of the Ice" and Come and Get It."

Almost-But-Not-Quite Note.

If this were only winter, with ice on the ground, the phone operator at Emergency ought almost to be able to compose another traffic accident, or perhaps a minor tragedy, out of these titles: "Rhythm of the Ice" (slip), "Tangled Traffic" (bang!), "Broken Butterfly" (look, she's bleeding), "Come and Get It" (clang! clang! and a couple of sirens!).

Or maybe I'm wrong.

Now He's a "Broadway Gondolier"

The immaculate and smiling Dick Powell, a recent visitor to the National Capital and environs while engaged in making another picture, will be seen on the screen of the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, beginning Friday, in a new vehicle for his voice and ebullient good nature in which Joan Blondell is co-starred. The title of the film is "Broadway Gondolier" and the story has something to do with Venice and the radio business in New York. Adolphe Menjou and Louise Fazenda are among a long list of other principals.

Roadside Theater

"TO DIE AT DAWN." The Roadside Theater presents the anonymous melodrama in four acts and six scenes, staged by Anton Hardt. Settings by Edith I. Allen; costumes by Dorothy Croissant. Piano accompaniment by Robert Burbank. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Long and laudable has been the series of old-time melodramas that the bucolic Thespians have presented at their Roadside Theater, but none has heretofore reached such lusty and vigorous crescendos as "To Die at Dawn," the anonymous work that entered its second week last night.

Opening in the pastoral quietude of the Kentucky countryside, the action soon plunges into a maelstrom of intrigue and villainy, counterpointed with comic and love themes, all taking place in locales ranging from the Stygian depths of Mammoth Cave to the Victorian elegance of the Governor's mansion.

To bear upon the dramatic unfolding of these events, which include almost every situation imaginable in a drama of an age gone by, the talents of Harold Stepler, Ralph Fowler, John Edwards, William Phillips, Elinor Cox Karsten and Lavina Merrick are extremely and most satisfyingly utilized.

Inadvertently omitted last week was mention of Mr. Phillips' pantomime entr'acte, entitled "Heavy Odds and a Tough Steak," a novelty unique in the list of the Roadsiders' "extra added attractions." Here, no less than in the role of Jerry Tadley, "who talks in chunks," did Mr. Phillips decisively score a merited ovation.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, July 23.

Director Frank Borzage is arranging a new setup for "Anchors Aweigh." A new setup takes about half an hour. Electricians start shifting the huge studio lights. The camera is wheeled into a new position. Portions of the set, the props, are being rearranged. Cameraman Sol Polito takes an occasional look through his camera. Director Borzage takes a look also. The stand-ins for Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler march to a position designed by Director Borzage. A collection of girls, they are playing the debs at this Annapolis party, sit about on long wooden benches. Some are drinking soda, some smoking, a few telling Pullman car yarns, a few catching up on sleep. Ruby Keeler is in her portable dressing room drinking tea. Dick Powell is sitting on a camp stool listening to himself sing. The large playback machine is grinding out a song Powell has previously recorded—"I'd Rather Listen to Your Eyes."

• • • •

Powell seems practically unconcerned listening to himself sing. I take a seat next to him. "Enjoying yourself?" I ask. He smiles. "How do you feel listening to yourself sing?" I ask. Powell answers: "I listen to myself to improve. I listen to a song and realize how I should have sung it, and then try to do it with the next number."

It is quite an experience listening to your voice for the first time, Powell tells me; it is not like you imagined. Now Powell is used to the sound of his voice. Actors will tell you of their amazement when they heard themselves speak from the screen for the first time.

• • • •

This is the time of the season in Hollywood when the studios are flooded with visitors. Every one who visits California wants to get on a set. Friends of executives, friends of exhibitors and friends of politicians all must be taken care of, for obvious reasons, and the majority of sets have more visitors than performers. Of course, the visitors are steered to those sets where the performers won't resent their public taking a peep at them in person. It would be bad for the boxoffice if a temperamental star bawled out a fan. Many would.

There was a mob of visitors on the set of "The Black Chamber," with William Powell, Rosalind Russell and Binnie Barnes while I was there. Powell was very gracious. He wasn't annoyed. He played his scene before the large audience, and took his instructions from Director William K. Howard. When the scene was completed and the visitors were ready to leave, Powell stood near the door and shook hands with the visitors as they left. He gave them a good handshake and a big smile. Powell knows how to act off the screen as well as on.

• • • •

The scene the visitors were watching took place in a large restaurant. William Powell and Binnie Barnes were sitting at a table. Director Howard was sprawled on the floor, practically beneath the table, giving his instructions. This was a rehearsal. When Director Howard was ready to shoot, he parked himself beneath the camera.

I watched the visitors who had come to Hollywood to see how pictures were made. I spoke to several of them. They insisted this view didn't break an illusion for them; in fact, it created more of an interest in pictures for them. One visitor, a large woman sitting on a large chair, amused me. She sat there knitting, and didn't pay any attention to what was going on about her. I wonder why she left her parlor?

• • • •

It was seeing Rosalind Russell on the set that reminded me of Myrna Loy and her situation at Metro, for Miss Russell looks more like Myrna Loy than Myrna Loy.

Miss Loy, who has been playing in pictures for many years, finally came into her own and achieved star success in "The Thin Man." Miss Loy, who now gets star billing, wants that kind of a salary. Metro refuses to meet her demands. Because of the difference and also because she didn't believe her role in "Escapade" suitable to the type she portrays, Miss Loy walked out of the flicker. This gave Luise Rainer, who had been walking about Metro, a chance. Miss Rainer scored big and is definitely a future star. Another stumbling block to Myrna Loy's demands is the fact that Metro had under contract an actress who greatly resembles her and who can play the exact type roles she does—Miss Russell.

• • • •

The three performers start to play the scene for Director Van Dycke. Before they complete it, he yells: "That's enough." They wonder what is wrong. Director Van Dycke walks over to Eric Blore and pokes him in the ribs. "I don't care if you sleep," says Director Van Dycke, "but stop snoring.. It is being recorded." It reminds me of Hugh O'Connell, who cracked nuts while they were making the flicker in "Once in a Lifetime."

Subtle Falsehoods.

Contract bidding, particularly when both sides are engaged is like a fencing bout and a psychic bid is a feint. The good player must know how to make the feint without leaving himself vulnerable to the thrust. But even more important, he must know how to foil the feint and parry the attack or pierce the defense of which it is the precursor. The most successful psychics are subtle falsehoods. They succeed by luring the opponents into an unmakeable contract even more often than they succeed in keeping them from bidding the true value of their combined hands.

Accurate Inferences.

Good players draw accurate inferences of the high card strength and the distribution of all three unseen hands by listening to opponents as well as to partner. Today's hand shows a psychic which succeeded in deceiving two nationally known experts in an important pair tournament by distorting their picture of the distribution around the table.

West, Dealer
North-South vulnerable

1—A pure psychic with an out in excellent support for partner's club suit.

2—With slightly over one honor-trick and a five-card major suit with distributional advantages. North correctly makes a free bid.

3—East's raise of the diamonds has convinced South that his partner must be very short of the suit. He knows there are not more than two losing clubs in the combined hands and from the bidding deduces there can not be more than two losing diamonds.

4—North's reasoning is a repetition of South's. He sees not more than one losing club and assumes partner will be short of diamonds.

5—Although East has been equally misled by his partner's diamond bid, he has already shown his hand, and despite his concentration of high card strength in diamonds, correctly leaves the decision of whether or not to save to West.

The Play.

The deuce of diamonds lead was won by East's King and a low diamond return trumped—to everyone's surprise—by West. That player's King of Clubs lead was then overtaken by East's Ace and the Ace and a low diamond lead which West ruffed defeated the four heart contract two tricks. West's psychic had proved devastating to North and South in a fashion West himself had never hoped for.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

CAPITOL HILL, and Secretary-Administrator Harold L. Ickes seem to be drifting farther apart over personnel matters, with the latest senatorial blast coming from Senator Dennis Chavez over the appointment of Edgar F. Puryear as director of employment for PWA and non-civil service emergency work in the Interior Department.

BAKER.

Puryear, formerly Democratic whip in both houses of the New Mexico Legislature and more recently secretary to the late Senator Bronson Cutting, progressive Republican, was appointed Monday by Ickes. His appointment was designated as providing relief for E. K. Burlew, who remains in charge of employes in the service.

"The appointment of Edgar Puryear," Senator Chavez told The Post last night, "by the Secretary of the Interior, as director of employment for PWA in non-civil service emergency work, is a direct slap at those in New Mexico who are permanent friends of the President, and not those who are friendly for convenience."

DIARY—

"It is in direct keeping," the junior New Mexico Senator emphasized, "with the Secretary's attitude toward those in New Mexico who have the welfare, both political and personal, of the President at heart.

"It is consistent with the Secretary's efforts at all times to give aid to the President's political enemies in my State. It can be said with justification that it is the unconscious arrogance of conscious temporary power.

"From all over the State, from friends of the President," Senator Chavez concluded, "protests are coming in, and no friend of the President has yet to say that he is satisfied."

According to Secretary Ickes, Puryear's appointment "was made because of the necessity of relieving E. K. Burlew, who remains in charge of personnel administration relating to service employes, of the pressure of work he has been carrying on for a long period (two years)."

Completion of the PWA organization and the recent decentralization of the public works staff by sending trained personnel from Washington to form units in each State permitted the appointment of Puryear, the order from the administrator's office said.

Under Ickes' "direction," Puryear will handle all applications for employment and appointments on non-civil service emergency rolls under the former's jurisdiction. Burlew will continue to handle, also under the administrator's "direction," personnel administration relating to employes already in the service, as well as budget matters, organization problems and special administrative assignments.

Puryear, who was born in Seymour, Mo., 41 years ago, is a graduate of Oskaloosa College, Iowa. He served in the Marine Corps during the World War and has held several executive positions as principal of Texas and New Mexico high schools. He was for eight years a member of the New Mexico House and Senate and was secretary to Senator Cutting for seven years.

A visitor upon seeing the words, "Lindbergh Exhibit," in the exhibit room maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, asked to be shown the Spirit of St. Louis.

Fraternity Delegates Named.

Edward Stevlingson (C), AAA, and Raymond Stanley (C), A. G. O., War, plan to leave this week-end for Denver to attend the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity conclave. Stevlingson is a delegate and Stanley an alternate, both representing District of Columbia Alpha Chapter, S. P. E., of George Washington University. They will visit the former's home in Bangor, Wis., before returning to Washington.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P, or C follows your name in this column, call in person the Federal Diary editor between 3:30 and 5 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Jolly Coburn and his Rainbow Room Orchestra, Mae "Betty Boop" Questel and other acts; screen, Leslie Banks in "Sanders of the River"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Noel Coward, Julie Hayden and Hope Williams in "The Scoundrel"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (fourth week of Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "No More Ladies")

THE CONTRACT COUNTER.

Life is Hard. Life is furious!
Never a moment to be curious.
From the 9 o'clock dong
To the 4:30 ding,
I have to keep rushing
For those darn things.

Contracts! Contracts! All day long,
An amateur here would soon get the gong.
From the Navy O. D.'s to the War N. G.'s,
If I had my way, I'd remove most of these.

Maybe I'm supposed to be a little hoss—
Holy gosh! Ssh! Here comes my boss. M. R. W. (P),

Finance, War, Postoffice.

Mrs. Barbara C. Miller (C), has returned from Memphis, where she visited three weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Craig. Mrs. Alice Butler is back from a vacation which took her to the Shenandoah Valley, Pennsylvania and New York. Mrs. Verla Bailey enjoyed a vacation with relatives at Mount Vernon, Ill.

Miss Jessie Allison (F), has visiting her for the summer her sister, Mrs. Lester Clem and two children, Evelyn and Dick, of Los Angeles. Miss Josephine Soukup has returned from a 10-day trip to Syracuse, where she visited relatives.

Capt. and Mrs. A. C. Harden are on a vacation trip in Ohio. Miss Lorena Baker (P), enjoyed last week-end at Virginia Beach.

Congratulations were showered on H. E. Pryor (F), Contract Clearance Unit, Corn-Hog Section, AAA, yesterday on the occasion of his first wedding anniversary. He is from Mississippi and Mrs. Pryor is from Rhode Island.

EMPLOYES of Bond Division, HOLC, yesterday honored their chief, Fred Billman as he celebrated his fifty-second birthday. His desk was laden with flowers, cigars and other gifts. Telegrams and messages came in all day. Most conspicuous among the gifts was a huge basket of flowers with a scroll containing the names of the approximately 150 employes of his division.

Q. Who is in charge of personnel at Department of Agriculture, and from what State is he? A. Dr. Warner W. Stockberger is Director of Personnel of the Department of Agriculture. He is from the Seventeenth Congressional District of Ohio.

Q. Is Howard University a part of Interior Department? A. No. The Secretary of the Interior merely supervises the expenditures of appropriations made by Congress for the institution.

3000 POUNDS OF PEPPER WAS PAID AS "RANSOM MONEY" BY THE CITIZENS OF ROME WHEN ALARIC BESIEGED THE CITY IN 408 A.D.
7-24-35

IN THE 1931 United States Open, on the Inverness Course at Toledo, Billy Burke and George Von Elm tied with 292 each for 72 holes. In their first 36 hole playoff they both turned in cards of 149 strokes, and on the second 36 hole playoff, Burke led with 148 strokes against Von Elm's 149. For the 144 holes Burke totaled 589 against Von Elm's 590.

In olden days pepper was a luxury beyond the reach of the common people. Prized as a rare commodity, costlier than any other spice, it was one of the most important things that the navigators of the Middle Ages sought when they pressed their search for new sea routes to India.

Pepper was so valuable in the early fifth century that it was used to ransom Rome when Alaric and his armies blockaded the city. In this bloodless blockade, during which he starved proud Rome into submission, Alaric agreed to withdraw his armies in exchange for a ransom of a ton and a half of pepper, a quarter million sterling, and fabric and leather goods.

Not knowing how much of a gift he was making, James I of England, granted to Sir William Alexander, Scottish poet and statesman, the largest gift ever bestowed upon a subject of the British crown. The gift included all of what is now Canada, including Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. The gift was made in 1621 and later confirmed by Charles I.

Tigers, Giants Rally to Divide Double Bills With Yanks, Cards

Americans Rally to Win Uphill 5-Set Clash at Wimbledon.

Allison Is Expected to Beat Henkel Today to Clinch Series.

By the United Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 23.—Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn wrote a new and blazing chapter in Wimbledon's saga of courage today when they yanked themselves from defeat five times to go on to victory over Baron Gottfried Von Cramm and Kay Lund in the Davis Cup doubles match between the United States and Germany.

The Texan and the Philadelphian pulled themselves together, first in the fourth set, and again in the fifth, to beat off five match points and give the United States a 2-1 lead in the series which will determine the challenger of England for the cup.

The final score was 3—6, 6—3, 8—7, 9—7, 8—6, but it doesn't begin to tell the drama of a match which kept 10,000 British spectators tense with excitement and set them howling and applauding at its finish.

Elimination Near.

The greatness of the Americans' rise over what appeared to be insurmountable odds was heightened by the richness of the stakes they were playing for. Defeat meant elimination from the Davis Cup chase, the end of America's chances. For Von Cramm is almost certain to lick young Donald Budge, of California, in one of the two concluding singles matches tomorrow, and, had the Germans taken the doubles, an even split would have given them the 3 points necessary for victory.

But victorious today, America needs but one win in the concluding singles, and Allison is almost certain to provide it in his match with the inexperienced Heinrich Henkel, who was defeated by Budge last Saturday.

Today's match, while it involved four men, really was a battle between two—Allison and Von Cramm. Van Ryn and Lund played a part—at times a magnificent part—but for most of the way it was a duel between the red-necked Texan and the blond nobleman.

Wimbledon never has seen more herculean efforts than they produced. Of the two, Von Cramm was the most amazing, for in Van Ryn, Allison had a seasoned campaigner of international caliber as a partner, but Lund, just a youngster, was only occasionally helpful to the baron. Until he tired in the closing parts of the fifth set, Von Cramm played like a man possessed.

Allison was only a shade behind the baron. From start to finish the fiery Texan was everywhere, trying for any and all shots, and making most of them. When the going got tough he was at his best.

The match, which was played at a terrific tempo throughout, reached the burning point in the tenth game of the fourth set, when the Germans, who started play as the lowest of under dogs, twice stood at match point. The Americans, with Allison serving, started this game brilliantly and quickly ran up a 40—0. But Von Cramm hit one of his breathless streaks and ran off four points to take the advantage.

Rises to Occasion.

One mistake and it was all over, but Allison, rising to the occasion magnificently, slammed home a twisting service ace that Lund never touched. Again the Germans worked it to match point and

Levinsky Hopes He Can't Tame His Swing; Maybe It'll Fell Louis

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 23.—There will be so much baseball in the papers, what with one thing or another that I am going to permit myself the luxury of speculating on the forthcoming educational exhibit and free lecture in Chicago a few weeks hence, when Joe Louis, colored, from Detroit, and King Levinsky collaborate in a public demonstration of the manly art of self-defense.

There will be a small fee charged to witness the exhibition, but the running lecture that will accompany it—and which will be delivered by Leaping Lena Levinsky—will be free. It is expected that students and scientists from all over the world will attend this demonstration because, as everyone knows, Prof. Levinsky, over a period of years of study, laboratory work and experiment, has reduced boxing to an exact science. He has developed the wild swing, for instance, to a degree never before attained by any dabbler in the art of fisticuffs. It is with the wild swing that he hopes to annihilate his co-worker in the exhibition.

A mutual friend told me that after Levinsky was knocked out by Baer, the great king complained bitterly that what caused his downfall was that he had his wild swing under control. "The punch ain't no good to me if I know where it's going to land when I let it go," said Levinsky, and then made a really profound statement and the deeper meaning of the true element of suprise. He said: "It don't do no good if only the other guy is surprised. I gotta be surprised, too. I gotta very frank 'n' open face. I gotta look the other guy in the eye all the time when I fight. I coulda landed my wild swing on a dime the night I boxed Baer, and I ain't no good when I'm that way."

It will be recalled that Jack Sharkey went to Chicago for a soft touch with the obese and uncouth Levinsky and was floored three times with rights to the jaw in the first round. The first time Levinsky was aiming at a guy in the back row. The second time he tried to knock Lena's hat off, and on the third one he closed both eyes. All three landed flush on the point of Sharkey's chin and no one could convince Sharkey after the fight that there hadn't been some one behind him with a baseball bat.

The pity of it that Levinsky might have been a world's champion had he discovered his famous punch earlier in life. Lena, The Wonder Woman, had an inkling of it way back in the days when Levinsky was taking a licking from Max Baer in Madison Square Garden, and she screamed, "Fight him from the distance, King; fight him from the distance." Obviously the wild swing is of no use at close range. The King preferably should be about half the width of the ring away from his opponent, and it is even more effective if he can get a little run, like a javelin hurler, before he throws it.

Lena is a foxy woman, and the new punch she is advertising for her brother, for the Louis fight, the right-upper-cross, with a full twist in pike position, is nothing but a scientific name evolved to mask the same fatal weapon, the wild swing, and it is with the wild swing that Levinsky hopes to conquer Louis. And incidentally, Levinsky's sparring drills for the development of this punch are fascinating. He works with two sparring partners, let us say Smith and Jones, in the ring at the same time. He aims the wild swing at Smith.

If he hits him it is a touch-back, and counts a point for Smith, but if he hits Jones then it is a success. He then aims the next punch at Jones and flattens Smith. It is the same as the cross ruff in bridge, in fact, Levinsky once confined in me that that is where he got the idea. He said, "You know, if I was only lucky enough to be crosseyed I could do it much better. If I lick Louis, I am gonna have a operation performed on me, to have my eyes crossed, so I can become champeen of the world."

I realize that all this is very here and there and not entirely specific, but I have great faith in the wild swing if Levinsky can really get it out of control by the time he meets Louis. There is talk of a delayed wild swing, in which the punch is started in the first round and dosen't land until the third, but you may set that down as press agent stuff and not to be believed. The plain wild swing, delivered either from the crouch or the prone position, is what will win for Levinsky if he is to win.

Louis is certainly not to be hit with any right-hand punch that he can see coming. The wild swing is never seen at all except, as Lena would say, from a distance. It looks harmless and merely as though the King were fanning himself, or maybe winding up to throw home. Inasmuch as he is on the other side of the ring when he starts, there is nothing to worry about. When you wake up, they will tell you what happened.

Nats, Indians In Twin Bill Today

Hayes Starts for Griffs; Walks Lead to Three Cleveland Runs.

By Shirley Povich,

EXCELLENT front office strategy saved the Nats from impending defeat yesterday.

On account of a double-header today, the Cleveland Indians saw their 3-1 lead wiped out and the game written into the records as unplayed. Rain that descended while the Nats were at bat in the fourth inning halted the game and the Nats' front office saw to it that it stayed halted.

By the simple expedient of doing nothing about the tarpaulin that lay handy along the left field boxes, the Washington Club made certain that all that had transpired would become illegitimate. The Nats refused to give the waiting ground crew the nod, and the diamond was soon flooded.

Thus the way was paved for a reprieve from defeat and a more profitable double-header today.

In Striking Contrast.

The procedure was in striking contrast to the alacrity and agility which the ground crew has displayed when rain has threatened a Washington lead.

When Umpire-in-Chief Charley Donnelly and Umpire Bill Dineen finally summoned courage to venture out of the dugout when the rain appeared to be abating, they each stuck one timorous foot into the mud along the first-base line, discovered that the field was unplayable, and called off hostilities.

The Nats had been making little headway against Thornton Lee, the Indians' lefthander, despite their four hits, but young Whitey Hayes' wildness contributed directly to the Indians' three runs.

Walks Hurt Hayes.

Hayes walked Trosky and Hale in the second inning and Phillips' single with two out scored 'em both. The Nats cut the lead to 2-1 in the second when Holbrook and Bolton singled to score Powell, who had walked, but the Indians picked up another run in the third with the aid of Campbell's walk, a wild pitch and Trosky's single.

Lee turned the Nats back runless in the third and had just retired Travis and Powell on pop-ups when the rain began to fall in torrents, with the tarpaulin wasting its usefulness in a tidy roll against the left-field stands.

Both teams will be up against it for pitchers today, but Manager Bucky Harris is expected to send Buck Newsom and Irving Hadley to the mound. Willis Hudlin will pitch one of the games for the Indians.

Carnera Off for Italy; May Encounter Neusel

By the United Press.

New York, July 23.—Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion, who was knocked out by Joe Louis last month, sailed for Italy today aboard the liner Conte Di Savia. He may fight Walter Neusel, German heavyweight, at Amsterdam September 8.

Pending the outcome of a breach of promise suit brought by Emilie Tersini, London waitress, the courts have tied up about $50,000 of Carnera's money. Before leaving Carnera had to pay an income tax of $5,275, most of it on his purse from the Louis bout.

Whitehill and Hadley Will Face Tribe Today

Perry's Loves Awe Hollywood; To Wed Helen Vinson, Is Report

By the United Press.

HOLLYWOOD, July 23.—Film colony connoisseurs of romance were busily trying to dope out tonight whether Fred Perry, Britain's world championship tenniser, was engaged in a love match, mixed doubles or just an elimination round.

Reports that the tall, dark-eyed English athlete with the slicked-back hair and handsome profile was ready to marry Helen Vinson, taffy-haired Texas film actress, left gossips wondering what Fred has done with his unfinished business.

When Perry left here last April on a rush order from his then No. 1 heart-throb, Mary Lawson, English actress, he had the following cases on the calendar:

Renee Torres, sister of Racquel Torres, who was seen with the tennis star frequently in Hollywood's hotcha resorts, and who was with him when Joe Benhamin, former prizefighter, reportedly hung one on the Britisher's profile.

Loretta Young, a very good friend of Frederick, seemingly, and, according to reports here, his guest at the Wimbledon tournament.

And Miss Vinson, herself, who was little more than a nodding acquaintance when Perry was here, but now—according to dispatches from London—is the real McCoy in Perry's round of hoodlums, engaged, and all that sort of thing.

Miss Torres entered the tournament when Perry squired her to a night club, and Benjamin, vowing he didn't like tennis players in general and English ones in particular, hung a looping right on Frederick's lip.

Benjamin claimed Perry passed a crack about his friend, Jack Dempsey, but Perry, contacted at his hotel where he was packing up to meet Miss Lawson's hurry-up call from across the sea, said he had only the "highest regard" for American athletes.

"Somebody apparently mistook me for someone else," he explained blandly. "I didn't even know the person."

Perry told reporters his homecoming was a result of stories that appeared in British papers concerning his reported scuffle with Benjamin, with Miss Torres named as a principal party.

Al Smith Scatters Hits as League Leaders Take 2d, 8-2.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—The New York Giants held to their half-game lead in the National League today, but it took four errors, three of them by Pepper Martin, to give them the second game of today's double-header after the St. Louis Cardinals had forged into the lead by winning the opening contest behind the great pitching of Paul Dean. The even split was witnessed by a crowd of 31,000.

Brother Paul, hurling four-hit ball and fanning 12, and Joe Medwick with two home runs carried the Cardinals to a 6-to-1 victory in the first game and stretched the Giant's losing streak to six games. The Giants, their regular hurlers already overworked, sent Al Smith to the mound in the nightcap and the young southpaw came through with a fine performance while the league leaders capitalized on the four Cardinal errors, getting seven unearned runs, to win 8 to 2. The defeat was the Cards' second in their last 20 games.

Wins His Eleventh Game.

There was little to the opening test with the exception of Dean's pitching and Medwick's slugging. The younger member of the Dean family had the Giants at his mercy in registering his eleventh victory as compared to seven defeats and increasing his total strikeouts for the season to 98 in 24 mound appearances.

Roy Parmelee started for the Giants and after yielding five hits and four runs, including Medwick's thirteen and fourteen circuit drives of the season, was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

Allyn Stout finished for the Giants, the cards counting twice on him in the eighth as the Giants went to pieces, making three errors, including double bobble on a double play ball by Hughie Critz.

Medwick did his best to save the nightcap, getting three singles and a double in four times at bat, but

Two Favorites Are Upset At Seabright

Mrs. Andrus and Hess Bow Surprising 'Unknowns' Are Eliminated.

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 23.—Fame was short-lived for the comparatively unknown players who created a flock of upsets in the opening round of the forty-eighth annual invitation mixed tennis tournament.

They all fell by the wayside today in the second round. Two headline performers went out. They were Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Wilbur Hess, of Fort Worth, Tex., 1935 national intercollegiate champion.

Mrs. Andrus was an upset victim of the promising and pretty Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—2, 6—4.

Hal Surface, of Kansas City, who caused somewhat of a mild sensation yesterday in cutting down John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, took the measure of McDiarmid's fellow-townsman, Hess, in a marathon duel that went three sets. The college champion won the first set, 15—13, and dropped the next two, 6—4, 6—2.

Trio Eliminated.

Three of yesterday's surprise winners went out swiftly. Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., was eliminated by Mrs. Henry C. Brunie, of New York, 6—4, 6—2; Mrs. Agnes Lamme, of Rye, N. Y., bowed to Mrs. John Van Ryn, 6—1, 6—4, and John Doeg, winner of the national title in 1930 and only an occasional competitor these days, went out at the hands of Henry M. Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., 6—4, 7—5.

Berkeley Bell, of New York, winner of the tournament last year, scored a 6—1, 6—1 victory over Jess Millman, of Los Angeles, while his two most serious challengers, Frankie Parker and Gregory Mangin, also won much as they pleased. Parker disposed of Princeton's Norcross Tilney, 6—2, 6—3, and Mangin, national indoor titlist, advanced to the quarter-final round with a 6—2, 6—2, win over Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla.

Advance Easily.

The same pattern was followed in the women's division. Carolin Babcock, of Santa Barbara, Calif., the winner last year and co-favorite with Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, and Mrs. Fabyan advanced easily. Miss Babcock won, 6—2, 6—2, over Helen Fulton, of Chicago, and Mrs. Fabyan eliminated Mrs. Lillian Hester, of Brooklyn, 6—0, 6—3.

The line-up for tomorrow's quarter-finals finds Parker vs. Culley; Mangin vs. Henry Prusoff, of Seattle; Bell vs. Edward W. Feibleman, of New York, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., vs. Surface. In the women's division it will be Mrs. Fabyan vs. Mrs. Van Ryn; Miss Wheeler vs. Mrs. Henry C. Brunie, of New York; Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of Los Angeles, vs. Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, and Miss Babcock vs. Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind.

Japanese Golfers Take 25th Victory

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 23.—The Japanese Professional Golf team ran its touring record in America to 25 victories as against 12 defeats and 4 ties by sweeping all three matches against Chicago's leading amateurs at Skokie Country Club today. On the basis of the scoring, 2-point best ball Nassau System, the invaders won, 7 to 2.

Jack Yasuda clinched the victory on the final green for his mates by holing an 18-foot putt for an eagle 3.

Results:

Nakamuri had the lowest score of the day, a 66.

Score Only Runs in Fifth Off Kennedy; Marcum Is Victor.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 23 (AP).—Though held to three hits by Vernon Kennedy, a rookie Mackman of 1934, the Athletics defeated the Chicago White Sox, 2 to 0, today and evened the series at a game apiece. The A's mixed a single by Jimmy Foxx, a walk to Pinky Higgins and Richards' double for the winning runs in the fifth inning.

Johnny Marcum, though tapped for eight hits, was invincible with men on base and registered his tenth victory of the season.

Sorrell's Pitching Aids Bengals to Split Day's Honors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The Yankees and Tigers clawed each other all over the Yankee Stadium today in a double-header opening their momentous four-game series for the American League head, and when the battling was all over nothing had been gained and nothing lost but prestige.

The Yankees won the first match, 7 to 5, and the Tigers the second, 3 to 1, before a crowd of 62,516. The Yanks were in first place by 12 percentage points, half a game, when the struggling started, and they were in the same relative positions when the sun went down on a steaming hot day.

Hurling Aces Falter.

Three of the great aces both teams counted on so heavily—Johnny Allen and Lefty Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees, and Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, of the Tigers—failed to finish what they started, although Allen got credit for winning the first game. The pitching hero was Vic Sorrell, chunky, veteran right-hander who was almost waived away from Detroit this spring.

Sorrell held the Yanks to eight hits in the second game, and was greatly aided by the daring base running of Ben Chapman, who got himself thrown out twice at crucial moments when a touch of conservatism would have meant important runs later. The Tigers got to Gomez in two innings, scoring two in the fifth inning on singles by Rogell and Hayworth, a sacrifice, and Pete Fox's double, and one in the sixth on a walk, passed ball, sacrifice and a fielder's choice. Johnny Murphy pitched the last two for the Yanks and allowed two of the Tigers' seven hits.

Greenberg Hits 27th.

Mickey Cochrane and Hank Greenberg hit homers, the latter his twenty-seventh in the first inning of the first game, but couldn't touch Allen again until the seventh when four straight hits counted two more. Charley Gehringer's homer off

Track Record Falls as Ebony Lady Takes Suffolk Feature

Choice Victor By 5-Length Margin

Brilliant Stretch Run Beats Up and Up and Propagandist.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 23. — The California-owned Ebony Lady won her second consecutive victory by capturing the Weymouth, the 1-mile and 70-yard feature of the twelfth day of the Suffolk Downs meet. She romped home five lengths ahead of Greentree Stable's Up and Up in the record-breaking time of 1:42.3 for the route. The new mark breaks by one-fifth of a second that set by Midshipman.

Cutie Face broke out of the gate in front with Bahamas right at her neck in the run for the first turn. Down the back stretch the two faced head and head with the winner staying off the fast pace about three lengths.

At the elbow of the first turn Charlie Stevenson turned Ebony Lady loose and burned up the course from there in running the position into the ground. At the stretch turn he was three lengths to the good and he increased the margin to five at the wire. Up and Up was away fourth and came with a rush down the stretch to net the place position by a length from Propagandist, in third. Bahamas and Cutie Face faded in the closing stages.

The winner was favored in the betting and paid $7 to win. Up and Up paid $5.60 to place, and Propagandist returned $4 to show.

Cup Donor Eliminated From Title Golf Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 23.—Boyd E. Hornor, president of the Clarksburg Country Club and donor of the cup which annually goes to the winner of the club's president's cup golf tournament, was forced out of the contest by Thomas Stone when he was defeated two up.

Young Stone, with a high handicap, forced the veteran Hornor to the limit from start to finish in the 18-hole match, finishing strong after being in the rear at the end of the first nine holes. Stone will face J. Forrest McNeill in the final.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NED REIGH, $4.40, $2.80, $2.40; REMINDING, $4.00, $3.20; SHINING SUN, $7.20.

NED REIGH, away fast, fought it out with LIGHTWEIGHT for the lead, drew out after leaving the back stretch and increased his advantage steadily through the last three-sixteenths. REMINDING, slow to begin and outpaced early, came with a rush through the stretch. SHINING SUN, slightly restrained while close to the pace, closed with good energy. LIGHTWEIGHT, hard ridden in an effort to keep pace, weakened under pressure in the last quarter-mile. CAPTAIN JINKS was going gamely at the close. ONUS was unable to reach the leaders. RUDENIA moved up fast in the opening furlong after a tardy beginning, but after entering into contention was unable to improve her position in the drive, dropping back in the last three-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:02. Winner, E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $17.20, $8.00, $5.20; CATINO, $5.40, $4.00; TEENIE R., $3.60.

BENARES was in hand for the first six furlongs while moving up gradually, swung to the outside in the stretch and, wearing down the leaders, was going stoutly at the end. CATINO improved his position gradually, wore down TEENIE R. for the command, but was unable to keep pace with the winner when challenged. TEENIE R. went to the front in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint, but was unable to stave off the closing bids of the first two.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:40½. Winner, B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATCHEYE, $11.40, $5.20, $3.20; BROWN HILDA, $4.60, $3.20; ALL HAIL, $3.00.

PATCHEYE worked her way up steadily while under slight restraint, drew clear nearing the stretch and, hard ridden, lasted to hold BROWN HILDA safe. The latter moved up steadily leaving the back stretch and, closing with a rush, was the fastest of all at the end. ALL HAIL, unruly at the post, moved up steadily, came through on the inside after rounding the far turn and closed gamely under punishment. MORESORIS was prominently placed all the way and held on gamely. PREFER forced the early pace, but weakened in the last five-sixteenths.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10½. Off at 4:11. Winner, Oak Tree Stable's gr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOGAN'S FOX, $20.40, $8.00, $3.60; CHATTERPOL, $17.00, $6.20; HUG AGAIN, $4.20.

HOGAN'S FOX, away fast, dropped back in the first half-mile, began moving up steadily thereafter and, closing stoutly on the inside through the stretch, came in the closing stride, CHATTERPOL, restrained while outside the pace, moved up on the outside, showed in front a few strides from the finish and just failed to last. HUG AGAIN, permitted to remain off the pace, came willingly through the last three-sixteenths, but was unable to withstand the winner. PRIMUTE moved up stoutly on the inside rounding the far turn and closed gamely, DON MANUEL, fast in the opening furlong after a tardy beginning, but after entering into contention was unable to improve her position in the drive, dropping back in the last three-sixteenths.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:41½. Off at 4:42½. Winner, P. M. Pike's bik. m. (5), by Flying Ebony—Plum. Trained by T. Hornung. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12 1-5, 1:38, 1:42 3-5. (New track record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EBONY LADY, $7.00, $3.80, $2.80; UP AND UP, $5.60, $4.00; PROPAGANDIST, $4.00.

EBONY LADY, under slight restraint while following the pace, moved up fast after reaching the far turn to take command, drew out steadily and won with speed in reserve. UP AND UP, under slight restraint, started moving up in the last three furlongs and closed with good energy. PROPAGANDIST moved around on the outside, started moving up in the last half-mile and closed going stoutly. CUTIE FACE showed good speed for the first five furlongs, tiring thereafter. INCANDESCENT dropped far back in the opening quarter-mile, but closed some ground in the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:20. Winner, H. C. Riddle's gr. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE FLANKMAN, $22.40, $10.40, $6.40; SKOTCHY, $4.60, $3.40; SANTA ANITA, $3.60.

THE FLANKMAN, prominently placed from the start, wore down CASH BOOK for the command and, hard ridden through the stretch, lasted to hold SKOTCHY safe. The latter was in the forefront in the beginning and, closing determinedly, was overtaking the winner rapidly at the end. SANTA ANITA, well up, was unable to reach the leaders in the last strides.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:49. Off at 5:52. Mrs. Betty Meckley Cards Near-Record 78 at Indian Spring

Club Titlist Plays From Back Tees

Rings Up Finest Round Since Course Mark of 76 in 1932.

MRS. BETTY MECKLEY, Maryland champion, came within two strokes of equalling her own course record at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday.

The twice former District titleholder and present Indian Spring Club champion shot a brilliant 78. It marked the first time this season she has cracked 80, and was her greatest 18-hole round since she set the course mark with a 76 three summers ago.

Playing from the extreme back tees, thus making the course stretch out to some 6,700 yards, Mrs. Meckley scored a 40 on the first nine and a 38 on the incoming side.

She was only seven over men's par. She holed every putt.

No Three-Putt Greens.

Mrs. Meckley did not have a single three-putt green, and had few one-putt greens. Her lone birdie came on the 483-yard fifteenth, where she reached the green in three and sank a 10-footer for a four. She also parred the 525-yard sixteenth.

An out-of-bounds shot cost her a six on the eighth and traps cost her shots on the fifth, seventh and ninth.

Standing on the seventeenth tee, Mrs. Meckley needed to finish 3-4, even par, for a 36, and a 76 that would tie her own record. She overdrove the short seventh, taking a four, and wound up with a five.

Jack Robinson and Bill Pettingell, two of the younger golfers, played the round with her.

Her card:

Out—par	4	4	4	4	4	3	5	4	3	—35
Mrs. Meckley	5	4	4	4	5	3	5	6	4	—40
In—par	4	4	4	4	3	5	5	3	4	—36—71

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood Golf and Country Club professional, will be presented formally to the membership of the club tonight at a dinner and entertainment in his honor. At least 300 members are expected to be on hand for the reception. Montague Ferry will serve as master of ceremonies. Don Chamberlin, club's vice president; Ed Olsen, golf chairman; Ted Rutley, greens chairman; Fred Fuller, club manager, will be among those making speeches.

H. S. Stine, A. F. Miles, R. J. A. Kammerer and George Gist tied for first prize with nets of 72 each in the blind bogey at Indian Spring. E. A. Johnson and Gene Houghton had 79s and also won prizes.

Mrs. C. B. Hills, with 71, won the ringer tournament at Indian Spring. Mrs. George Diffenbaugh, wife of the professional, was second with 74.

Jimmy Norvell, Dave Thomson's assistant at Washington Golf and Country Club, has become an expert with one club. He is capable of scoring a 79 or 80 with a mid-iron.

Woodstock Wins; Two Players Hurt

Tops Mt. Jackson in Slow Game by 13-8.

Woodstock, Va., July 23.—Woodstock hammered the Mount Jackson nine here today at will to take the count, 13-8, in a slow game. Litton, who started for the league leaders, was battered from the mound before the first inning was over, and was relieved by Jim Shannon, who pitched seven innings in which he allowed 11 hits. Shannon was forced from the game in the eighth when he collided with his brother, who was playing first base, when both attempted to catch a fly ball, both men were carried from the field. Jim Coffman, Woodstock tosser, walked from the field in the third after he had been tapped for three hits, and had allowed five runs to cross the plate. Jake Sheetz took the mound and held the league leaders to five scattered hits in the seven innings that he twirled. The former sheriff was the master of the game after relieving Coffman, striking out five batters, and retiring the side with the bases loaded in the third by strikeouts.

Grace Is Honest.

Pittsburgh (AP).—When Earl Grace, Pittsburgh catcher, stole a base this season it was the first such larceny he had committed since entering the National League, in 1931.

Brunswickmen Victors Over Mt. Airy

Wakefield, Frederick and Walkersville Also Win in League.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., July 23.—Brunswick, first-half champions in the Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery Counties circuit, defeated Mount Airy, 5 to 4; Walkersville ran away with New Market, 18 to 5; Warfield downed Point of Rocks, 6 to 4, and Frederick took the measure of Damascus, 15 to 9. The Cedar Grove-Middletown and Church Hill-Jefferson games were postponed on account of rain. The games marked the opening of the second half.

Mount Airy took an early lead on Brunswick and apparently was headed for victory when the railroaders rallied in the seventh inning and put over three runs, tieing the score. The champs went ahead in the eighth frame when an error, stolen base and single netted one run, and clinched the game in the ninth on an error, two fielder's choices and stolen base.

Costly errors helped Wakefield to set back Point of Rocks. The Pointers took the lead in the first inning, lost it in the third, evened the count in the fourth and went ahead in the fifth. Wakefield tied up matters in the eighth and pulled the game from the fire in the ninth.

Trout's home run with the bases full in the second inning put Walkersville in the lead in the set-to with New Market. The Glade Valley team hammered three New Market hurlers, while Warrenfeltz held the east county team to six hits and struck out 15. Trout, Eaves and W. Zimmerman led at the bat for the winners.

Two Big Innings.

Two big innings, the first and third, when 13 runs were put over, enabled Frederick to win easily from Damascus. After scoring five in the first inning, singles by Kline, J. James, Bradley and Arnold, doubles by T. James and Abrecht, hit batsman, walk and errors yielded eight more in the third. Kline blanked Damascus until the fourth session when four singles, an error and walk yielded four runs. Three more were scored in the seventh on a single, three errors and hit batsman.

Boy Trackmen Are Stopped By Rain

Virginia Avenue Leading in Playgrounds Meet; 400 Entered.

VIRGINIA Avenue Playground romped away to a commanding lead in the Department of Playgrounds Conference track meet for 1935 before a sudden downpour halted the meet of the Southern Conference yesterday at Eastern Stadium.

Approximately 400 boys, from 10 years up, were on hand when the meet started at 2 o'clock. Some were equipped with running shoes and shorts; others rolled up their long slacks and ran barefoot. This is the smallest conference in the city.

All but 8 of the 24 events scheduled had been run off before the clouds opened and the deluge fell. The eight events, all relay races, will be run at 2 p. m. Friday.

Piles Up 79½ Points.

Virginia Avenue piled up 79½ points; Potomac, 24; Jefferson, 17½; Garfield, 8; Orr and Hoover, 5 each; Congress Heights, 4, and Buchanan, 1.

The Northern Conference will hold its meet at 2 p. m. today at Central Stadium; Western Conference tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Western Stadium, and the Eastern Conference Friday at Eastern Stadium.

70-pound Class.

40 meters run—Won by Junior Misell (Virginia Avenue); second, Solomon Iroff (Potomac); third, William Fowler (Jefferson).

Running broad jump—Won by Parker Scott (Virginia Avenue); second, John Fitzpatrick (Garfield); third, Richard Hughes (Virginia Avenue).

Elkins and Clarksburg Meet on Tennis Courts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., July 23.—The Elkins tennis team will go to Clarksburg Sunday for the first of two home-to-home matches and may have the addition of Jimmy Allen to their roster.

Allen gained the quarter-finals of the State open tourney at White Sulphur Springs last week before losing to Paul Kunkel, Cincinnati star.

Cumberland Juniors To Vie in National Play

Entries for the State elimination must be filed by August 10, W. Earl Brooks, State athletic office for the Maryland department of the legion, said today.

Second Largest Field in History of U. S. Event Will Compete.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 23.—One hundred and ninety-seven golfers, the kind who play their golf when and where they can find a course, will tee off in the 36-hole qualifying round for the fourteenth annual public links championship at Indianapolis next Monday.

They represent a variety of professions, from artists to sledge-hammer swingers to nightstick-twirling policemen, but they're golfers who scorn their inability to belong to some fashionable club for the love of the game.

The entry list is the second largest in the history of the championship.

One of the high spots of this year's championship is the four-man team from Honolulu in quest of the Warren G. Harding team trophy championship won last year at Pittsburgh by the Los Angeles quartet with a record aggregate of 602. The Pacific Islanders include Arthur Armstrong, who was beaten in the 36-hole final last year by David A. Mitchell, of Indianapolis, in addition to Kammy Lau, Bill Smith and Joe Freitas.

Mitchell will defend the title on the Charles E. Coffin course, well known to him. It is expected that chief opposition will be furnished by Armstrong; Albert E. (Scotty) Campbell, the Seattle youngster who had won the Canadian amateur championship twice, and Carl F. Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh.

Kauffmann is known as the "Bobby Jones" of public links golf by virtue of winning the championship three years in a row, starting in 1927.

Another dangerous contestant will be Charlie Ferrara, winner in 1931 and 1933, who was put out in the third round last year by Joe Coria, of St. Paul.

Celanese Triumphs Again in Md. Loop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 23.—William Stevenson, the only undefeated regular pitcher in the three county amateur leagues, turned in his eighth consecutive triumph of the current Potomac Valley League campaign when he limited the Mount Savage Junior O. U. A. M. to three singles and twirled the Celanese Spinners to their twenty-first triumph in 25 starts, 2 to 0.

Wilson Reynolds, ace of the Paul Edward Club, marked up his ninth win in 11 starts when he downed the Ellerslie Cardinals with six hits, struck out 13 batsmen and bagged a 3-to-1 verdict in a mound duel with Derl Keller.

Ridgeley won over Pompey, 8-6, and Cresaptown defeated Allegany, 6-4.

Two Newcomers Faced By Dickinson Gridmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Carlisle, Pa., July 23.—Two teams not met during the 1934 football season are on Dickinson's nine-game football schedule for the coming fall: Lehigh, to be played at Bethlehem October 12, and Haverford, the opponent for October 26 at Carlisle.

September 28, U. S. Army Medical Field Service School, home.
October 5, Delaware, home; 12, Lehigh, at Bethlehem; 19, Swarthmore at Swarthmore; 26, Haverford, home.
November 2, Allegheny, home; 9, Gettysburg, home; 16, Franklin and Marshall, Lancaster; 23, Muhlenberg at Allentown.

Team to Make Tour.

Bristol, Va., July 23.—Having won 18 games against two defeats this season, Jenkins, Ky., has booked games with teams in Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina, and will leave shortly on its tour.

Quartet to Be Honored at Reception Tonight at East Potomac.

WASHINGTON'S four-man Harding Cup Team which will compete next week in the National Public Links Championship at Indianapolis is in for a big day of golf today.

This afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock the qaurtet—Claude Rippy, captain; George Malloy, Bradley Burrows and Bobby Burton—will play a four-man team from Indian Spring Country Club at Indian Spring.

Tonight at 9 o'clock the four players will be honored at a public reception at East Potomac's golf course.

Commissioner George Allen, himself an ardent golfer, is expected to be on hand to present the District Municipal Championship Trophy which Rippy won recently in the 72-hole National Public Links sectional trials at Rock Creek and East Potomac. Rippy shot a 282 to set a new all-time District record.

Prizes also will be presented to the members of the team. At the same time Andy Oliveri will be awarded the Graham Trophy for his victory in the District Junior Public Links championship. Among those who will participate in the ceremonies at East Potomac are S. G. Leoffler, public links concessionaire; Roland Mackenzie, Congressional Country Club professional; Mel Shorey, East Potomac professional; B. Harry Graham, East Potomac manager; Ed Burns, Rock Creek manager, and Dave Herman, District public links representative of the United States Golf Association, who will serve as master of ceremonies.

The team will leave tomorrow morning for Indianapolis.

Tom Belshe, Indian Spring golf chairman; Al Houghton, well-known professional; Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic semifinalist, and Louis Fuchs will make up the Indian Spring team facing the Harding Cuppers.

Takoma Tigers Get League Franchise

Take Place of Jewelers; Meet Cabin John in Debut Sunday.

THE Takoma Tigers, a top-notch sandlot aggregation, have taken over the franchise of the Horning Jewelers in the Maryland County League and will make their debut Sunday in Post Association ranks against Cabin John on the latter's diamond.

Final arrangements were completed last night in a telephone conversation between Vic Gauzza, league president, and Manager Ed Bladen. The Takoma boys hope to attain the heights to which the Tigers soared in 1928-29 when they won the city-wide title.

Jake Powell, now with the Nationals, started with the Tigers and was the team's big star and fence-buster in its championship days.

Adds Five Players.

Pilot Bladen realizes he has a tough task ahead of him to win The Post title in the Maryland County loop and he has fully prepared for the grind. Five new players have been added to the Tigers' roster,

Harahan Heads Van Sweringen Railroad Units

Elected President of Chesapeake & Ohio and Pere Marquette.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 23.—William J. Harahan, widely-known railroad executive, returned today to a post he relinquished in 1929 to the late John J. Bernet—the presidency of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. The road's board of directors elevated him to the office from that of senior vice president.

The board of directors of the Pere Marquette Railroad, also in session today, elected Harahan president of that line, another office made vacant by Bernet's death July 5.

Harahan was elected president of both the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Hocking Valley road in 1920. He continued in these capacities until 1929, when O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, then comparatively new but powerful figures in the industry, placed Bernet in the key position of their railway system.

Harahan, born December 22, 1867, at Nashville, Tenn., was the son of a former president of the Illinois Central Railroad, James T. Harahan. His father trained him for the career that was destined to make him a national figure in the railroad industry.

He entered railroading 54 years ago in a minor capacity with the Louisville & Nashville line. He became identified with the Chesapeake & Ohio in 1889 as engineer of maintenance for the Cincinnati division.

For two years he was with the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern. In 1892 he entered the employ of the Illinois Central, of which he became general manager in 1904 and vice president in 1905.

From 1907 to 1910 he was with the Erie Railroad as assistant to the president. He was elected president of the road in 1911. He accepted the presidency of the Seaboard Air Line Railway in 1912, an office he occupied until 1918, when he became federal manager of the route.

Harahan is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Railway Guild and a number of prominent clubs, including the Midday Club of New York and the Union League of Chicago.

The executive received his education at St. John's College, New Orleans. He married Susan Smith, of Nashville, June 10, 1890. He is the father of a large famliy.

Business Disturbed By Small Coin Plan

Local business and banking houses yesterday expressed themselves as greatly disturbed over proposals that mill and 5-mill coins would be minted to accommodate sales tax requirements of certain States.

Business machines worth hundreds of thousands of dollars now in use by the Government and private concerns would be valueless as no provision for the small monetary denominations has been made.

The only workable proposal, bankers asserted, would be the restriction of coins to only the payment of taxes. Should they get into general circulation, they warned, with merchants selling at split cent prices, present day book-keeping systems would be valueless.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	370	446
Declines	289	170
Unchanged	185	147
Total issues	824	763

Stocks—Repeated profit taking assaults on the market were repulsed by inflation sentiment which brought metals and rails to the fore. Inflation riders on some of the President's must bills were regarded as sufficiently threatening for action in some Wall Street quarters. Rails were helped by the report that Eastman opposed a rail pension at this time. Sales were 1,739,050 shares.

Bonds—Corporates improved steadily with the exception of Federals. New year's highs were recorded by a number of industrials and some junior rails. Transfers were $11,214,000.

Curb—Bulk of the list was firm. Hiram Walker off 3 points because of fire damage to one of its distilleries. Trading was active with 259,000 shares sold.

Grains—Tumbling Minneapolis wheat prices disturbed the Chicago mart and was held partly responsible for the 3-cent drop from the day's highs. Mild rally just before the close. July wheat, 83¾.

Cotton—Selling in favorable receipts resulted in net declines of 3 to 16 points. July closed at 11.75.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.20. Refined the same at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7, 6¾ and Santos No. 4 final at 8.

$43,111,500 Bonds Mature in August

New York, July 23.—Corporate bond maturities during August will total $43,111,500, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. The number of bonds and notes making up the total is 78, of which 4 amount to $1,000,000 or more, as follows:

August 1—Central West Pub. Ser. 7s, $1,166,500; Laclede Gas Lt. Co. notes, 5½ per cent, $3,000,000; Seaboard-All Florida first "A" 6s, $25,000,000; Seaboard-All Florida Ry. first "B" 6s, $2,000,000.

July maturities amounted to $58,886,150, and the 124 issues and portions of issues falling due in September total $41,220,700.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Close Higher in Spite of Profit-Taking Sales as Mining Groups Come Forward—Guilders and Lire Drop.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 23.—With a turnover of around 1,800,000 shares, the largest since May 28, the stock market pushed resolutely ahead and stood by while speculators gathered some fat profits. Margin trading seems to have been fairly unimportant, for the setback did not bring on a hurried selling movement and demand on the declines was good enough to leave the market as a whole higher on the day. Bonds were weak in the Government list. Foreign exchange was unsettled by another drop in guilders, bringing an engagement of gold from Amsterdam, and a fall in Italian currency. Wheat declined 1¼ cents a bushel, to 84⅛ cents.

Stock trading began with a bulge in those groups which recently have led the rise, particularly the steels, and trading volume was so heavy that the ticker fell a few minutes behind for a while. The pace slackeneed a bit on profit taking, but gains were well held and when the recent runners became tired others were brought forward. Attention was turned from motors and steels to silvers and rails. Silvers were pushed up 1 to 4 points, in spite of the fact that today marked the beginning of the third week of unchanged silver metal price.

Other commodity stocks did well. Coppers were fractionally higher. Rubbers were active and hardened 1 to 2 points. Most of the steel issues moved on to new high prices for the year. Otis had the largest turnover. Farm implements held their interest and rose 1 to 2 points, the advances putting them into new high ground. Mail orders followed, but more slowly.

In the profit taking of late afternoon some issues dipped rather smartly. Schenley came down more than a point from its early high price. American Can lost a point or so. Lehn & Fink continued under pressure. American Telephone was hard to move. Rails to go ahead for a while included Central, Delaware & Hudson, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and Great Northern. Western Union rose nearly a point at its best

Foreign Exchange Uneasy.

Foreign exchanges continued unsettled. Dutch money slipped below the gold point. Italy's decision to lower, through royal decree, the 40 per cent gold ratio against currency, fixed in 1927, affected the lira and Italian bonds. Exchange went down about a quarter of a cent. What the Italian government did was to choose in favor of letting some of the gold reserve go rather than to reduce the exchange value of the lira to a level which would make the purchase of war materials much more expensive. All day the lira was supported intermittently from France, and presumably this manipulation will continue, the French support being for Italian government account. Though Italy denies devaluing, the lira is now in a position similar to the German mark, which is pegged at a rate which bears no definite relation to gold or to natural demand and supply.

Denial by the Rumanian government that it had devalued the leu 30 per cent, as reported from London, does not alter the fact that depreciation of the Rumanian currency has occurred in the foreign exchange markets. As in the case of many other currencies, the value placed upon the leu in the official quotations differs materially from those in free though possibly clandestine markets. As things stand now the Rumanian exporter has been getting a premium of 10 to 40 per cent while the Rumanian importer has been correspondingly penalized. Devaluation would merely make de jure a position which is now de facto.

Money markets were dull. This is the time of year when commercial borrowings, if it is to get anywhere, usually makes an appearance. This week's statement of member banks in leading cities shows a small rise, but part of it doubtless was bank purchase of intramural acceptances. Bankers here say they see little sign yet of important commercial borrowing, and with the prospect for a further rise in excess bank reserves between now and the end of the year they doubt if even the current low interest rates will hold. The situation in the money market does not fit in closely with the activity in the stock market, based presumably on rising activity in a number of industries. However, a number of other factors are in the equation. One is the large supply of money on hand with many corporations.

Call Rate May Drop.

Some discussion in the meantime is going on over the possibility of further reduction in the call rate. Demand is not keeping pace with rising prices for stocks. Actually the market is said to suggest a charge of one-eighth of 1 per cent, instead of the one-quarter held for the past few months.

For all the press of investment money into those sections of the stock market as appear to be headed for higher earnings, and the recent peace along the old inflation battleground, faint rumblings of the war drums are heard. It may be that more is made of the Government's effort to bar gold clause suits than ought to be, but the fact that the Administration is seeking to cut off the possibility of suits on losses that might be suffered in future from dollar devaluation naturally arouses those given to suspicion of the soundness of Federal finance.

Whatever may be the intentions of the Government, or whether the weight of the deficit may force further declines in the dollar's gold value and even a collapse in Government bond prices, some sections of the market are becoming more wary. At the same time the silver issues are taking fresh hope. Today's weakness in Government bonds, despite the growing ease of money, and the odor of inflationary sentiment in stocks, did not pass unnoticed.

Bond Values Up 10 Billion Since 1933

Securities That Were Written Off by Bank Examiners Score Comeback.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Refutation of the gloomy appraisals that were given some unsure bonds and stocks in bank portfolios during 1932 and 1933 has come with the upward surge in these securities that has placed them in position to be redeemed anywhere from par to 105.

Bank examiners who, during the dark eras before the bank moratorium, advised that many issues were no good and should be thrown out, had only the first laugh in the chain of events that has led to a comeback exceeding the most optimistic expectations.

New York Stock Exchange bonds alone have appreciated approximately $10,000,000,000 since March of 1933. Stock values, though not considered as important to the solvency of many banks, have increased about $21,000,000,000 in the same time.

A condoning factor in the mistakes made by bank examiners during those period is the natural lack of comprehension that existed on eventual effect that the excess bank reserves and nominal rates of interest on bank money would have on lifting securities levels.

Resent Attitude.

Many bankers still resent the hard-hearted attitude that was taken by examiners towards issues whose ratings did not entitle them to be carried on the bank portfolios at cost prices. The disposition to force the throwing out of all low-rate securities and compelling the banks to take the loss would have meant exhaustion of the capital and surplus of many now-going concerns.

Banking authorities believe that now is the time to urge the banks that have remained intrinsically weak and have been bolstered only by the jump in securities values, to liquidate at the highest bond prices of the decade. They assert that many institutions which should never have been allowed to reopen after the moratorium take advantage of the prevailing prices and relieve members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation of overhanging liabilities.

The largest proportion of investments made by banks since 1933 have been in Federal bonds, which have accounted for half of the total rise in values. The average prices of the group has gone from 103.05 to 105.34. Virtually every Treasury bond or note that the banks have bought since 1933 is now quoted at a profit.

Another factor in the greatly strengthened position of the country's banking system as a whole is the appreciation in the listed value of stocks. Much greater than that in bonds it approximates $21,000,000,000. The main benefit of the stock gains has been in the liquidation of common stocks that were carried as collateral and retained little or no equity for the borrower.

Provident Mutual Gains $2,500,000

New York, July 23.—Insurance in force of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. showed a gain of over $2,500,000 during the first six months of 1935, according to Edward Marshall, vice president and actuary. Total insurance in force on June 30, 1965, stood at $937,293,000, as compared with $934,767,000 on December 31, 1934, representing the first increase since 1931.

Reasons for this gain, according to Mr. Marshall's statement, include an increase in the sale of new insurance for the first six months of this year, and a steady decrease in net cancellations. Such cancellations for the first half of this year amounted to $4,516,000, as against $5,003,000 in the corresponding period of 1934.

New paid life insurance for the first six months of this year amounted to $47,558,000, a gain of 18.2 per cent over the same period last year.

Far West Building Now at Boom Pace

New York, July 23.—Vast improvements in the building industry throughout all areas of the Far West during the first six months of 1935 is noted in the Bank of American Business Review as the outstanding business development of the half-year period.

In the first half of this year, the value of building permits in 49 cities of the eight Western States reached a total of $52,697,735, a gain of 95 per cent over the first half last year.

With a total of $8,052,972 in building permits for June, California cities showed a gain of 133 per cent over the like month last year, and for the State's gain was 107.2 per cent over the first half of 1934.

Stewart Warner Doubles Profit

Earnings for Half Year 82 Cents a Share on the Common.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—Stewart-Warner Corporation and subsidiaries six months ended June 30 net profit $1,020,491, equal to 82 cents a share on the common stock, against $540,260, or 43 cents a common share, in the same period last year.

Union Pacific Railroad reports net operating income of $457,591 in June, compared with $867,365 in the same month last year.

Sunshine Mining Co. reports June profit at $216,774, against estimated profit of $218,365 in the preceding month.

The Associated Gas and Electric Corporation reports for 1934 gross revenues of $83,975,089, a gain of $2,641,787, or 3.2 per cent over 1933, and sufficient to cover increased expenses and nearly enough to cover increased taxes. Operating income was $915,569 lower than in 1933, at $25,064,086, allowing for expenses, taxes and depreciation.

Penick & Ford, Ltd. reports for the six months ended June 30 net profit of $478,452, equivalent to $1.29 a share of capital stock. For the first half last year net profit was $489,079 or $1.25 a share on a slightly larger number of outstanding shares.

Granite City Steel Co. for the six months ended June 30 had net profit of $312,373, equal to $1.22 a share on the capital stock against $200,245 or 78 cents a share for the first half of 1934.

Gotham Silk Hosiery Co., Inc. and subsidiaries report for the six months ended June 30 consolidated net income of $92,774, equivalent to $3.41 a share of 7 per cent preferred stock. In the first half of 1934 the company had a consolidated net loss of $203,091.

General Foods Corporation reports for the first six months net profits, after all charges and provisions for taxes, of $5,862,722, equal to $1.11 a share on the common stock. This compares with $5,882,712, or $1.12 a share in the same period a year ago. In the second quarter earnings were equal to 47 cents a common share, against 42 cents a share earned in the second quarter in 1934.

Marshall Field & Co., Chicago department store, today reported an improvement in net results in their business during the first half of 1935 of better than $1,000,000. Reporting at the end of the second quarter, the firm announced that net sales had been $24,184,100, or an increase of 4.1 per cent over the same period in 1934, following a 3 per cent improvement in the first quarter of 1935 over 1934.

Crude Oil Output Increases in Week

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 23,700 barrels in the week ended July 20, totaling 2,738,800 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 23,600 barrels to 2,174,500 barrels.

Refineries representing 89.5 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 76.3 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,598,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 89.5 per cent of total, operated at 74.1 per cent of capacity, was 2,523,000 barrels.

By the Associated Press.

Sharp weakness in the Italian currency following suspension of the 40 per cent gold coverage requirement for the lira by the Rome government failed to unsettle the rest of the foreign exchange markets yesterday.

The lira declined 19 of a cent in New York at 8.06 cents. In London the Italian unit recovered to 61¼ lire to the pound as the result of official support, after having been as low as 63½.

In Paris the dollar shaded higher at the equivalent of 6.622 cents to the French franc, as in New York the franc was unchanged from Monday's close at 6.62¼ cents.

The pound sterling was likewise unchanged in New York at 4.96⅜, while earlier in London the dollar had firmed slightly at $4.96⅞ to the pound.

Blight Damage Tumbles Price In Wheat Pits

Break in Minneapolis Causes 3-Cent Drop in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 23.—Tumbling Minneapolis wheat prices disturbed the Chicago market today and was partly responsible for a 3-cent drop here from early top levels. The break in the Northwestern market was interpreted by bears here as an indication that crop damage from rust and drought in spring wheat territory is proving less serious than expected.

Minneapolis July wheat declined 5 cents a bushel, the permissible limit, closing at 1.02½, almost 20 cents above Chicago July and the only wheat quotation in the country higher than a dollar. September at Minneapolis lost 3½ cents.

A mild rally from the low just before trading ended reduced the net loss of wheat futures here for the day to ⅜@1¾ cents, September closing at 84⅛@84¼. Independent steadiness was shown by nearby corn options and corn finished ⅛ off to 1 cent higher, September 75¾@75⅞. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ up, rye ½ lower to 1 cent higher, and barley was a cent up.

Largely because of a limited interest, corn futures remained relatively steady, ignoring the decline in wheat. Establishment of a $11 hog top was reflected in higher provisions prices.

On the Air Today

Once in a while the most artfully directed bit of subtlety will go astray. There was, of example, the announcement last week of Martha and Hal coming from New York to do five programs a week on a long-time contract at WJSV for an out-of-town sponsor.

It seemed rather amusing after the local radio barons had auditioned the finest talent in their respective files, to have an out-of-town team employed. And I observed in this space that the time would come when some one would produce a radio show here in Washington to stand up creditably beside New York productions.

That hapless observation has haunted me since. Everyone connected with the presentation of Martha and Hal (including the "kids" themselves, no doubt) felt that it represented the old familiar resentment of the "home town" at having "furriners" brought in.

• • • •

As a matter of record, the comment was nothing more than, alas, a bit of spoofing, directed at the production gentlemen at the local offices and not the talent that misfired. Having never seen nor heard Martha and Hal I hardly had any prejudices.

And in order that they may feel right at home from this moment on, insofar as this poor column is concerned, I take this occasion to make clear the paragraph last week.

Further, as far as I know, no radio act in the local precincts writes patter and special lyrics as do Martha and Hal and hence they must have received no competition here for the job. So again, welcome to Washington and all that sort of thing.

Eddie Duchin begins a twice-a-week schedule over N. B. C. networks from the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles . . . Mondays on the Blue network (WMAL) at 11:30 and Saturdays on the Red (WRC) at 11 . . . American and English chorus girls will talk shop with Danny Dare, dance director, as interviewer, WOL, at 4 p. m.

• • • •

Marian Galloway, Clifford Barbour's "girl friend" in "One Man's Family," is Helen Stryker off the air. She wandered into the N. B. C. studios in San Francisco purely by chance when auditions for the part were being held and landed it easily, thank you. She was born at Galena, Ill., educated in the East, met David Warfield and decided then on a stage career. And she studied and later played in Warfield's company. She made her radio debut in Seattle when her family moved to the West. She is small and dark-haired.

The new generation of Cohans takes to the air today. Georgette, daughter of the beloved George M., is guest of honor in the "Airbreaks," new talent show, WRC, at 12:30 p. m. Georgette is an impersonator and also will sing her dad's celebrated song, "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway."

A most amazing range of tastes in radio fare is showing itself through the poll of listeners' program preferences, as the poll forms clipped from the Sunday radio page continue to reach this desk in increasing numbers. For example, each person sending in the form (or listing his favorite programs on a post card) is asked to name five programs only. Approximately 215 forms have been tabulated, or a total of 1,075 program titles have been named up to this point. The duplications of favorites has been so low that 188 separate programs have been named. The program most frequently named as No. 1 favorite is "One Man's Family."

Read the radio page next Sunday for a complete tabulation. If you would like to vote before the poll form is reprinted in next Sunday's Post, send your five favorite programs, listed in order, to the Radio Editor, The Washington Post. See how your favorites stack up with other listeners' selections. J. H. H.

Rites Set Tomorrow For Norman Clayburn

Funeral services for Norman Eugene Clayburn, 69, for the last 16 years an employe of The Hecht Co., will be held in St. Peter's Catholic Church tomorrow at 9 a. m., followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Clayburn died at his residence, 1000 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, Monday night.

Funeral Services Held For Abraham Stein, 45

Funeral services for Abraham Stein, 45, of 903 Monroe street, who dropped dead in the 600 block of E street Monday while on a shopping tour before going to Colorado for his health, were held at Sigmund Danzansky's chapel, 3501 Fourteenth street, yesterday afternoon. Burial was in Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

For several hours the body lay unidentified. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

James Carroll Rites Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for James Carroll, 78, formerly of 908 Eleventh street southeast, will be held today at St. Peter's Church, Second and C streets southeast. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Carroll, who was a lifelong resident of Washington, died Sunday at Providence Hospital. For over 20 years Mr. Carroll was employed at the Washington Navy Yards, retiring in 1925.

Mr. Carroll is survived by two sons, J. Barnard and William H. Carroll; and three daughters, Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. Albert Bond and Mrs. William Lewis, all of Washington.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—With trading rather quiet transatlantic issues, especially steel and nickel shares, were the feature on the stock exchange today, exhibiting strength owing to cheerful Wall street news. Italian bonds declined on gold coverage news, while other foreign issues also eased. Oil shares held firm. The market closed quiet.

Paris—After the sudden drop in the Italian lira had depressed prices on the bourse today and had weakened rentes, strong support of this foreign currency presumably by the Bank of France, caused it to rally and steady the market. International issues held steady, while Rio Tintos and Royal Dutch stocks improved. Prices were advancing at the close.

Berlin—Recent heavy declines induced buying orders which stimulated quotations on the boerse today throughout the list. The closing was firm.

Naval Stores Firm.

PROPOSALS

TREASURY DEPARTMENT. Procurement Division, Public Works Branch, Washington, D. C. July 15, 1935.—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 1 p. m., Aug. 13, 1935, for furnishing all labor and materials and performing all work for the construction of the U. S. Dept. of Agri. Bldgs., Bridges. Attention is directed to the special conditions of bidding set forth in the specification. Upon application, 1 set of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications must be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $10 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, U. S. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any subcontractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. A Miracle.

("Apple trees planted in Park avenue, New York, two blocks from Forty-second street, are bearing apples. A pie will be made for Mayor LaGuardia."—News item.)

Oh, apples of Park avenue,
I feel a pity deep for you;
How can an apple prosper in
The tumult and the traffic din?

I see you hanging from a tree
That's never known tranquillity—
A tree that blisters in the heat
That's wafted from a city street.

You seem content in such a spot,
But, applesauce! I know you're not.
I see upon each apple's face
The wish to be some other place.

All day the traffic noises roar
And shake an apple to the core;
You hear the tramp of countless feet,
And know a strange, unholy heat.

You never know the kiss of dew,
The solace of a meadow blue—
The song of winds from hill and glen,
The litany of thrush and wren.

In pleasant fields most apples grow,
Where chipmunks play and cattle low;
You struggle in a city . . . Why?
To make LaGuardia a pie!

Oh, tree, your apples will, I fear,
Taste more than just a little queer;
An apple must be very tart
That grows in some great city's heart.

Yet, apple tree of Murray Hill,
You've shown more than a rugged will . . .
Where traffic roars and signals blink
You've worked a miracle, I think.

Comparative Values.

An American girl has been fined $5 for shocking Paris with a nude dance. Five dollars worth of shock in Paris is the equivalent to about $35,000 in this country.

A man died recently in Ireland at 76 who boasted that he had cut out sleeping years ago. The dispatch says, "As to how he did it, he always declined to say." Cutting out all sleep is very simple: you just count sheep.

Transgression.

Life is a headache, a heartache, a woe,
Mocking us grimly wherever we go.
Pleasure inordinate never suffices,
For satiety always will follow our vices.
From cradle to grave we constantly strive
To keep this forlorn mass of aeons alive;

Life is a headache, a heartache, a woe,
Mocking us grimly wherever we go.

Alack, and alas, such dyspeptics as I
Should never mix lobster and truffles with pie!

Those lights down below... in that pit. I can't understand. Yes... they're fireflies.
Whoole! What a scare. The door on this rocket closing and...
But, why are those fireflies traveling in pairs?
And in rows too?
And that humming noise. A sort of hot whistle.
Coming into this rocket was terribly dizzy. I'll never again...
The more I think of those fireflies traveling in pairs...
And they're dimmer now. I wonder.
They're not fireflies... they're autos... traveling along the streets.
This rocket went up... with me in it!
HEY!
What a situation.. my word! Let me think.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter X.—Murder in the Arroyo.

It is mandatory that a special agent of the Bureau of Investigation carry certain equipment when his high-powered automobile speeds to the scene of a crime. An important part of this, of course, is the armament necessary to combat the present-day criminal. But even more important are certain more peaceful implements.

One is a high-powered magnifying glass. Another is a kit of dusting powders, black for white surfaces, silver for metals, dragon's blood for those where pale red will best present a comparative color. Then there is a camera fitted with flashlight batteries and a small electric globe, it is only necessary to aim it at a nearby object and press the lever, the flash light attachment makes close-up picture-taking possible without other equipment, even at night. All of this is for fingerprints.

The special agent does not always work in municipalities. Many of his cases take him miles from any habitation. But whether he be in New York or in the desert, his fingerprint equipment is always within reach. It was present, for instance, several years ago, when special agents hurried out of Prescott, Ariz., toward a Navajo Indian camp in Skull Valley.

Viola Jimulla, a squaw, had gone early that morning to a brush-grown arroyo for firewood, only to grunt with fright, then, a speeding lump of agitated fat, turn and run toward camp. She had seen the sprawled form of a dead man, face down in the sandy soil.

Out of the excitement which followed, there at last evolved a powwow. This was a white person who lay dead, all the Indians knew him—A. M. Cavell, an agent man who, for years had driven a Ford sedan about the streets of Prescott as a taxicab. Crimes on a government reservation come within the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Investigation, the sheriff's office telephoned immediately for special agents. Together they went forth.

Yavapai Indian Denies He Is Guilty

The old man's skull had been fractured, the bloodstained iron bar which evidently had been used to strike the blows lay nearby. Tire marks on a side road about 20 yards away, and bloodstains on the brush, showed that the man evidently had been killed in his car and dragged to this spot. But for the moment the special agent dismissed all that. His attention was centered upon what the magnifying glass had revealed on that iron bar. There, plainly outlined in the dried stain of human blood, was a fingerprint.

Carefully the special agent dusted the mark, to bring out its characteristics more clearly. He photographed it. Then he turned to other matters, especially the broadcasting of descriptive data on the stolen car and a search of all garages and filling stations at which this car might be seen. Prescott yielded nothing. The search broadened. At last, on a road leading toward Kingman, Arizona, the special agent found a lead in a filling-station proprietor.

"Come to think of it," the gas vendor said, "I believe I did see that car. It was about 9 o'clock on the night you say this man was murdered. An Indian drove up in a Ford. I filled it up and he pulled out toward Kingman."

It was not long before the special agents, aided by State officers, working in the comparatively restricted area of the small town of Kingman, picked up an Indian who answered the description given by the filling-station man. At the jail, he said he was George Dixon Sujynamie, a Yavapai. Again and again he denied his guilt. At last the special agent interrupted his story. Out of the various things which had been taken from the Indian's pockets, a special agent had selected a small red tobacco can.

Tribal Death Chant Brings Confession

"Look here, Sujynamie," he said. "After you killed Cavell, you were nervous, weren't you. You needed something to brace you up. So you took out your tobacco can and rolled a cigarette. Remember that?"

The Yavapai denied it.

"We'll take his fingerprints," said the special agent laconically. Then three things were compared: the photograph of the print from the iron bar, the bloody print on the tobacco can and the black smudges on white paper. They matched. The State officers turned to begin their questioning—only to be halted by a warning sign from the special agent. He had spent many years among the Indians; he knew their ways, their lore. A word spoken at this time, an interrupting movement or sound, might ruin everything.

The Yavapai had turned toward the wall. He straightened and raised his head for a moment, as if trying to stare out through his confines to the sky above him. His fists doubled. Then, slowly, he began to beat upon the wall, the sound reverberating hollowly, while a wailing cry came from his bloodless lips, a Yavapai death chant:

"Tut ju pi nevako——"

Silently the special agents waited, neither moving nor speaking. There was only that slow, ceaseless pound on the wall, and the wailing cry of a distraught man as he called upon the Great Spirit to hear that he stood ready to die. At last the drum beat ceased.

The Only Infallible Identification Method

Sujynamie turned. He stood straight and began to speak, as if reciting by rote:

"My name is George Dixon Sujynamie. I hereby testify myself guilty. Trouble has started me back on the month of February, on a girl. She is a fair Navajo. I could marry Yavapai, but I want this girl. Navajo chiefs not permit marriage because me another tribe. So I make plan kill her, kill them. Sheriff at Prescott, Ariz., many months ago arrest me, take my gun. I have no pistol. I think old man who drives car Prescott have pistol. I need it and the car to kill these Navajos. So I make plan in which I wanted to get this taxi driver to take me out to Indian Camp, that which I may have opportunity murder him, take gun and car, drive out to Skull Valley, kill girl, kill Navajos who not let me marry her, and commit suicide myself, by myself. No one help me.

"I take with me steel iron which I use to beat him, and Great Spirit forgive! I have done it without failing. I find no gun. I drive car to Skull Valley, find girl and Navajo Chiefs gone other camps. I took the old man and dragged his body into gulley. Then I took car and try to run away. But Great White Father arrest me. Sujynamie ready to die."

One morning about six months later, within the confines of Fort Whipple Reservation, the death chant of the Yavapai sounded again—but this time there was no need for special agents to stand silent, lest they halt a confession. Sujynamie was ascending the scaffold.

So much for fingerprints in the field; they are constantly in use to solve crimes, just as they are invaluable in every police station to establish the only possible infallible method of identification.

Formations Unchanging Through Entire Life

The ridge formations of the fingers remain unchanged during the entire life of an individual and until putrefaction sets in after death. The characteristics of these patterns are never identical in any two fingers. It is not possible to erase or change them in sufficient degree to hinder identification, unless the entire skin is removed down to the vascular layer. John Dillinger even risked death in the hope that he might be rid of his telltale prints. It was in vain; a criminal carries a potential policeman on every one of his ten fingers.

The evolution of fingerprinting started so long ago that it has no true history. On the face of a cliff in Nova Scotia, for instance, can be found an Indian carving of the outline of a hand, with ridges and patterns crudely but clearly marked. The Chinese of ancient times also had a custom whereby, on papers of state, there was an impression of the thumb print.

The slow growth of the system may be gauged by the fact that Dr. Henry Faulds, an Englishman, at that time connected with the Tsukiji Hospital at Tokyo, Japan, in 1880, conducted experiments which definitely established that the varieties of the fingerprint patterns were very great, that the patterns remained through life, and that, even after the removal of the ridges by the use of pumice stone and acid, they invariably grew again. Sir E. R. Henry, commissioner of Scotland Yard, devised a simple system, which was introduced in 1901 and which forms the basis of the present classifications employed by identification bureaus in the United States.

According to the Henry system, all fingerprint impressions are divided into loops, twinned loops, central pocket loops, arches, tented arches, whorls and accidentals. A classification is made by utilizing these patterns, together with the ridges intervening and surrounding two fixed points, known as the core and the delta.

In 1903 Sing Sing prison adopted the system, following experiments at Napanoch, Auburn and Clinton prisons by Capt. James H. Parke, of the office of the superintendent of prisons.

Scotland Yard Officer Makes U. S. Believe

This was followed by the establishment of the idea in St. Louis, due to the enthusiasm of Sergt. Ferrier, of Scotland Yard, who, while guarding the Queen's Jubilee exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition, also talked fingerprinting to anyone who would listen. Four days later came the request from Leavenworth Penitentiary for an appropriation to make impossible a duplication of the Will West-William West incident. All this happened more than 30 years ago, and the prints which were taken then are still on file, waiting to trap law violators—or to solve a mystery. Fingerprints never forget.

One of the great functions of the Identification Unit is the nailing of imposters. Many persons may remember the excitement over the story of an alleged war ace, whose memory had come back to him after many years. Few persons know that it was the Bureau of Investigation which exposed him.

It began during the retreat of the Bonus Army from Washington, during the early autumn of 1932. A detachment reached Charlotte, N. C., and suddenly one member apparently recovered from an amnesia of many years' standing. He now thought he remembered who he had been: Arthur Courtney Campbell, famous member of the Lafayette Escadrille, shot down behind the German lines in 1917.

Immediately every newspaper in the United States and France took up the story. It became the talk of Paris—the supposed body of Arthur Courtney Campbell had been removed from its war front grave in 1929 and placed, with due ceremony, in the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial Mausoleum at St. Cloud, France. But, in the meantime, a special agent of the Bureau of Investigation at Charlotte took the man's fingerprints and sent them to Washington.

A day later the halo of heroism for Clarence Stephen Wendler, alias James Edwin Wendler, alias Jim Wendler, alias Arthur Courtney Campbell, had faded. He had never even seen the Lafayette Escadrille, having enlisted as an apprentice seaman at Richmond, Va., in 1929, after the war was over, and deserted a year later.

2,000 Are Expected To Attend Scout Outing

Two thousand Boy Scouts and Scoutmasters will hold an outing at Marshall Hall next Thursday. At 10 a. m. they will board the City of Washington at the Seventh street wharf. The scouts will be in full uniform.

Col. E. L. Mattice, who planned the outing, has announced baseball, races and other outdoor sports.

Twice a week a detail of First Aid Scouts goes to Marshall Hall to aid in caring for the children and to render first aid when needed. As first aid station they possess a cabin used by Dr. Marshall in Revolutionary days.

Discovering America

Even the Executives Are Grateful for CCC Camps; 'Go West, Young Man,' Still Holds True.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., July 23.—It's easy to figure how fine the CCC camps are for the young fellows. But I was surprised to find that they're something more than an assignment for the executives.

At least, that's true up here, in the camp high in the canyons behind Albuquerque.

Lieut. C. W. Miller is in command. A slight, wiry figure with vanishing blond hair and the most friendly look in his blue eyes, he showed me his domain. No millionaire exhibiting a newly acquired Rembrandt ever glowed more than Lieut. Miller as he displayed the orderly tents of his camp, their tops rippling in the brisk tonic breeze; the spotless mess hall and kitchen, the ample ice chests, storerooms, and comfortable recreation halls.

His understanding and sympathy with his youthful charges was so sincerely human, so at variance with my personal observation of the Army that I was curious.

He Needed the Job, Too.

Lieut. Miller, I found, was not a regular Army officer; he's a Reserve officer, with a commission in one of our paper units. They're putting these Reserve officers in charge of CCC camps as quickly as possible, he tells me. Before he got this duty, he—well, he wasn't working at his profession of expert geologist, with more than the requisite letters after his name! He was as thankful for his job as any road-weary boy come to these cool, spectacular hills from hostile city streets.

His educational director, A. J. Christoph, came in just as I had seen the last foot of campground. His raincoat was dripping and his eyes sparkled behind rain-blurred spectacles. Mr. Christoph was full of news: five boys were hired for the forestry service, as technicians, at $120 a month! Mr. Christoph, too, knows what that means. He'd been a law clerk for a railroad, and everybody knows what sort of times the railroads are having . . .

Job-Hunting Duty.

The educational director's business is to find out what sort of help the young men need, whether it's the Three R's, or some technical training, and to see, if possible, that they get it. Maybe he's supposed to hunt them jobs. Mr. Christoph seemed hazy in his generalizations, but he knows that he himself uses every spare minute, and every connection he has in the surrounding territory to find work for his boys. He hasn't been unsuccessful. His records show that in the past 18 months, he's placed 192 of the 230 who have come under him. And mostly in private business.

This is the first CCC camp I've visited, but I've seen the boys working here and there and everywhere as I crossed the country. They look happy. They swing away busily. Whatever they were when they enlisted, they're usually fine physical specimens when you meet them, in blue trousers, often shirtless, eyes shaded by well-pulled hats. And as the trucks bring them home in the evenings, they sing, for all the world like college boys coming from football games.

They are bringing a lot of boys from Eastern cities, far away as New York, out into the West. Sometimes they get so homesick they leave. Sometimes they're scared for a while by the tremendous silences, the mountains and vast distances. Often, however, they just stay out West. Not a bad idea. There's room out here . . .
